Project summary***

A brief overview of your project. Include how it will connect with or complement the class curriculum, how many students the project will reach, if the project will benefit underrepresented populations, and the benefits that you expect for the students.

We would like to continue the project we started this year to create a self-sustaining program, the "Panther Paw Project" (PPP), where students in Boulder High School's (BHS) two Intensive Learning Centers (ILCs) (Autism ILC and Multi ILC) make and sell greeting cards. Many of the students in the ILC have limited exposure to job skills training, may take a longer time and more repetition in order to learn life skills, and struggle to secure paid employment. The PPP will enable the BHS ILC students to learn and practice skills like material organization, money management, packaging items for sale, labeling items, maintaining an accurate inventory, fine motor manipulation, advertising (e.g. BHS Panther TV, hand-made signs), taking orders, and deliveries. Some of the work on this project has already begun but we are hoping to design a curriculum for the 2023/2024 school year that will enable students to pursue creative endeavors meaningful to them while working on math, money, and job readiness skills. We are applying for the Boulder Arts Commission Arts Education Projects Grant to support and expand the Panther Paw Project so that students can continue creating cards and also learn how to make/sell bars of soap and jewelry, as well.

Project calendar*

Benefit to students*

In what ways will this project directly benefit the students and their growth as cultural participants or in the creative industries? What new skills or experiences will be offered?

Students in the Autism ILC may require a variety of instructional approaches and accommodations, including discrete trial, incidental teaching, use of social stories, and sensory diets. Students in the Multi ILC may have a combination of cognitive, medical or physical, communication, and adaptive behavior needs. All ILC students often require significant modifications to the general curriculum. This can mean that they are unable to participate in general education high school classes related to cultural participation and creative expression. This past year, ILC students who have participated in PPP card-making have increased their abilities to follow the card-making sequence, use novel tools (tape roller), design unique cards, clean and store materials, among many other skills! Staff have observed that students also demonstrate a sense of pride when they offer and sell their cards to people in the building. Expanding the PPP to include jewelry- and soap-making will allow more students- particularly those with more limited attention, regulation, and visual motor skills- to participate in the various steps of the processes required to make and sell these goods. Most ILC students have never had this kind of opportunity before.

Complementing curriculum and offerings*

How does this project enhance, or fill a gap in, the generally available curriculum and offerings? For more information about Curriculum in Colorado visit this website.

Students with significant disabilities are inherently diverse and often present with unique learning profiles and skill sets. Unfortunately, due to the complex needs of students with autism spectrum disorder (ASD) many young adults lack job readiness skills (1). Over the next five years, 500,000 individuals on the autism spectrum in the United States will transition into adulthood and some data suggest that only eighty-five percent of college graduates affected by ASD will find employment (2). Participation in the PPP will not only capture the unique talents of our students, but staff will be able to harness and guide their efforts in ways that develop job readiness skills. Our students are often drawn to various art forms since traditional academic forms of expression elude them. By creating PPP, students are able to use their math and reading skills to promote and share their art. By allowing students to express their abilities in real and meaningful ways, we are able to tap into their passions and their voices while engaging in true-to-life experiences. These experiences help develop socialization, communication, and sensory modulation skills which in turn can help prepare our students for employment & life after high school.

Proposed outcomes and evaluation strategy*

Describe your evaluation strategy for this project and how you will collect data. How will the benefits to the students be measured?

The final evaluation of the effectiveness of this project will be based on qualitative and quantitative data collected from a variety of sources. Data will be collected and tracked on the following points throughout the 2023-24 school year.

- number of students involved in PPP
- level of support required for given tasks within each activity, per student involved
- number of items made and sold
- financial tracking (cost of supplies, profit from selling goods)
- pre- and post-interviews with both students and staff (qualitative interview)

Benefits to students will be measured by:

Comparison of pre and post...

- work samples and/ or money-management quiz, as appropriate
- student self-report of experience in PPP
- student progress towards Individualized Education Plan (IEP) goals

Community Priorities

The City of Boulder's Community Cultural Plan is a visioning and strategic document that describes how the people of Boulder will align efforts, with the support of the municipal government, to achieve our collective vision: Together, we will craft Boulder's social, physical, and cultural environment to include creativity as an essential ingredient for the wellbeing, prosperity, and joy of everyone in the community. The Community Priorities are six points that summarize the community's most common responses in answer to the question, "What is your vision for Boulder's culture and creative economy?". Reference: Cultural Plan and Community Priorities.

Community Priorities*

In what way will this project contribute to one or several of the Community Priorities described in the Community Cultural Plan? Does the project contribute to one priority thoroughly? Or, does it address many? What specific benefits to the community are planned? How will success be measured?

Examples of ways to demonstrate impact on the Community Priorities may include descriptions of how your project or organization:

- Supports artists and creative professionals by providing professional development programming.
- Contributes to Boulder's creative identity and creates a vibrant cultural destination through high artistic merit and excellence in the practice of a medium or discipline.
- Engages the community in civic dialogue about the arts through interactive outreach in the neighborhoods.
- Adds creativity in the public realm by engaging underserved populations in art making for their community.

The Panther Paw Project contributes thoroughly to the following Community Priority: Adds creativity in the public realm by engaging underserved populations in art making for their community.

As described above, this project will increase access to creative expression activities for students with disabilities who require high levels of support at Boulder High School. This population is often not able to access general education or community-offered art classes due to the students' challenges in sensory processing, self-regulation, visual attention, fine-motor coordination, sequencing, language-processing, and/or comprehension skills. Structured support for the development of leisure activities and artistic skills is often overlooked for kids with special needs as their behaviors or other areas of need (e.g. self-care) can require a lot of time and attention to address. However, involvement in and mastery of a creative endeavor like making cards, soap, or jewelry can be a regulating and enjoyable leisure activity in addition to increasing students' employable job skills. The BHS ILC program has the existing structure, support, and expertise that is required to increase our students' involvement in and enjoyment of craft projects that tap into their individual creative expressions. The biggest measure of success of the PPP will be the degree of student involvement in all aspects of the project. We hope that by the end of the year, students have taken active roles in most aspects required to run and maintain the PPP. In addition, students will be asked to provide work samples of creative expressions for a pre/post comparison of their artistic expressions following involvement in the PPP.

Cultural equity*

Among the goals of the Boulder Arts Commission is to encourage the equitable, fair, and just distribution of funds in support of the community. This includes providing support to applicants whose organizational leadership or audience represent groups who are typically underrepresented, i.e. culturally diverse groups, organizations focused on age diversity, etc.) Describe how your project does or does not fulfill one or several of these categories. Describe how your project will address affordability, availability, accessibility, accommodation, and acceptability to diverse groups. For reference, please review the Boulder Arts Commission and Americans for the Arts Statements on Cultural Equity.

References:

Boulder Arts Commission Statement on Cultural Equity Americans for the Arts Statement on Cultural Equity

The PPP will support a typically underrepresented and diverse group of students for whom community and art involvement opportunities are often limited. As this program will take place during the regularly-scheduled school day as part of the curriculum, students in the BHS ILCs will have easy access to participation in the related activities. Students will not incur any costs for involvement in the program as all supplies will be provided by the school or through this grant money. The program will be staffed by ILC teachers, paraeducators, and related service providers (e.g. occupational therapist, speech therapist, BCBA). These professionals will be able to modify, provide additional verbal/visual/physical support, and effectively grade activities to meet the "just right challenge" for every student involved. Being awarded this grant money will ensure that the PPP can expand offerings of creative pursuits to meet the interests and skill levels of a wider variety of learners than we are currently targeting with card-making alone. The ILC students increase their sense of belonging within BHS when others buy their handmade cards. And BHS staff and gen ed students are better able to see how capable and talented the ILC students are.

Additional Questions

Encouragement points.

Among the goals of the Boulder Arts Commission is to encourage the equitable, fair, and just distribution of funds in support of the arts community. Panel members use these "extra points" to balance the scoring, emphasizing applications which tend to score lower in standard categories or historically are underrepresented in grantmaking. Commissioners will be looking for these elements in your responses above.

Examples include:

- First-time applicants and those who have never been awarded a grant.
- Youth applicants who are applying with the help of a mentor of legal age.
- · Have the potential to support community and participatory culture and non-professional artmaking.
- Applicants for whom English is not their first language.
- Non-western European art forms or other forms of culture that have typically been disadvantaged by the systems and traditions of grantmaking.
- Elements of the application that the panel member determines will significantly advance stated priorities of the Arts Commission, important issues in the community outside of the arts, or other impacts that are not expressed in the other scoring criteria.
