Tennis leads to new friends!
author: Amy Dodd

I remember going to the Boulder Tennis Association’s drop-in tennis on a Saturday morning many years ago at Centennial Middle School. My husband & I rotated around playing with all kinds of players until near the end of the day we met Molly & Charlie. We enjoyed playing with this other couple so much that we made plans to meet and play again - and again. This led to them making a mixed doubles tennis league team which we joined. It’s hard to describe how this expanded our horizons. We met so many other tennis players who became friends, we joined gender specific leagues and met more friends. Now we have a network and can almost always set up a game when we want to. All we need now is some nice, new facilities so we have plenty of courts in good condition on which to play. Thanks!
Helping the homeless

author: Peschz

Civic park area is a place for all walks of people to mingle and live. I've helped feed and clothe the homeless for years. It'd be a lot easier of a job if the police didn't sweep them and take all their things. Open up more public restrooms, water fountains, trash bins, and needle bins to solve a lot of the "issues" that people with privilege often complain about. Also, you could just house them without so many contingencies and hurdles.

Rollerblading author: shaquettay

I have been learning to rollerblade in Foothills Community Park in order to join a roller hockey league in the future. I live in Goss-Grove and didn't even know it existed for the longest time - you can imagine my surprise when I saw there were two roller hockey rinks! My favorite memory is doing shooting drills one day. I put one net face-down in front of the other so only the top corners of the net were exposed, and tried shooting into them for accuracy. It was getting cold and dark but I told myself I wasn't gonna leave until I made two in a row. My hands were getting numb and blistered, and the wind was howling, but I finally got it - maybe past closing time! I was cold and in a lot of pain but watching the sunset while peacefully shooting pucks around was very enjoyable.

Boulder tennis leagues led to many lasting friendships author: pkmarmot

My best Boulder Parks memories stem from playing in fifteen year's worth of tennis leagues in the Boulder community. Since tennis league teams usually consist of ten to fifteen players of the same skill level, and often involve partnering up with one or another team member each week for doubles, you really get to meet and know a lot of people in a comfortable and competitive atmosphere. With our home courts usually at either South Boulder Recreation Center courts, the Centennial Middle School courts, or the Tom Watson Park courts, we would host league matches against teams from around the area: the local private tennis clubs as well as the Longmont, Arvada, Thornton, and Louisville public court teams. After great matches, we (pre-Covid) would sit around at the picnic tables and share the traditional snacks and beverages and get to know the other team’s players as well. In such a situation you can’t help but make some good and long-lasting friendships. Since my wife and I play in both same-gender leagues and together in the mixed doubles leagues, we now know scores of people we would otherwise have never met. We’re both grateful to Boulder Parks and Rec for providing the courts for these league opportunities, and hope league tennis will continue on Boulder public courts for many years to come.

Met my first friend in Boulder on the Centennial Tennis Courts!
author: MaryAnn

I moved to Boulder in 1973. Signed up for a tennis class through City Parks/Rec. Met Betsy who has become a lifelong friend. Subsequently played BTA ladder matches all over those city courts. Then watched my 2 boys learn to play and compete with CARA programs through the city. For the last 30 years, I have been playing league tennis through BTA, watching sadly as the city courts sprout weeds and develop dangerous cracks and actually become embarrassing when hosting a team from another facility. It's time for the City to dedicate some resources to renovating some of the existing courts and building new ones. Why can't we have a facility like Arvada's APEX Center with indoor public courts as well as new lighted outdoor courts? There are thousands of folks in the Boulder area who cannot, or do not want to, join a private club. Tennis has become a sport for the masses and Boulder needs to keep up!

Joys of tennis
author: mandyjasper

I have so many memories from the past 20 years of my father coming to visit and us driving all around town to try out new courts and check out the views. This became our thing, our way to get some father/daughter bonding and one on one time during his visits. We would play our match and then head downtown for lunch.

Playing tennis during the pandemic

author: Jean Rosmarin

I really appreciated being able to go to South Boulder Rec Center this year and play tennis. I loved seeing all the other people out doing activities together. We have met many parents teaching their kids to play tennis, young twenties just looking to be outside together, and other families that we know from south Boulder. And then as I would look around, I would see lively games of pickleball, young twenties on the volleyball courts and frisbee golf courts, people walking their dogs around the lake, and kids playing soccer in the field. And I felt really lucky to be hunkering down in Boulder during this pandemic and really grateful that we put money into these kinds of facilities. Thank you!

Something. Plus, it's been wonderful to see so many members of the community turn to the tennis courts to survive the pandemic. Young children and their parents, teens, the elderly, folks who look like they've barely played tennis before. It's a great place to gather safely and have some fun. Please keep supporting it.

Making friends via Boulder Tennis Association author: Mike M

I was new to the area and did not want to make the commitment of joining a private tennis club. I signed up for the Boulder Tennis Association (BTA) and immediately found a great bunch of people from all walks of life, very welcoming and great fun to play with in their "Drop In" sessions. Through this connection I now have a great group of friends that I would never have met without the BTA.

Learning to lap swim author: shibbs
I've always wanted to try lap swimming but was never able to get over the hump of actually doing it. But with Spruce pool just down the street I finally got myself to go and I've been loving it ever since! I can't wait until it warms up again and the outdoor swimming reopens.

Hi Albert, thanks for reaching out! Unfortunately, the North Boulder Library is not a Parks and Recreation project, so I'm unable to provide any more detail than is available on the project web page (https://boulderlibrary.org/nobothree). You can contact Antonia Gaona, North Boulder Branch Library Project Manager at gaonaa@boulderlibrary.org to answer your questions about the project. Thanks! Morgan

Hi there! First of all, I wanted to apologize for the late response - I didn't realize I was not being notified of new questions, but that's been fixed now. I wanted to let you know that we've received your question, and unfortunately it's a pretty complicated question and it will require me to reach out to a few different people for answers. I will post a response publicly as soon as I have the answers. Thanks for your patience! - Morgan Gardner

Thank you for your question. As Boulder’s Parks and Recreation department, our mission is to promote the health and well-being of the entire Boulder community by collaboratively providing high-quality parks, facilities, and programs. The purpose of the Master Plan Update is to ensure that we are meeting the community’s needs and desires for our system of parks, facilities, and programs. Both addressing homelessness within our community and managing prairie dogs are complex issues that require collaboration with other city departments and organizations. Everyone, including homeless individuals, is welcome in the parks if they are following park rules. The city continues to take a coordinated approach to encampments, leveraging a team that includes police, housing and human services, open space staff, parks crews, nonprofit agencies, and a private contractor. It is the policy of the City of Boulder to prevent and disband encampments as quickly as possible to avoid harm to encampment inhabitants, the broader community, as well as public spaces and natural resources legally and compassionately. The BPR Master Plan Update Project Team has reached out to several community homeless service providers to participate in stakeholder focus groups. We hope to work with those service providers to do targeted outreach with homeless populations within Boulder as part of our engagement process so that the voices of all community members are heard in this process. Similarly, prairie dog management is directed by several city-wide policies and recommendations, including: The Urban Wildlife Management Plan: Prairie Dog Component The Wildlife Protection Ordinance The recommendations of the Prairie Dog Working Group In general, the city’s goals are to provide for the long-term ecological sustainability of wildlife while proactively reducing conflicts between humans and wildlife. The objectives of these policies and recommendations are to conserve prairie dog populations where possible in the urban service areas and to remove them from urban areas where they conflict with other land uses and with humans. Like wise, the city – through Open Space and Mountain Parks – seeks to support ecologically sustainable prairie dog populations across the broader landscape while maintaining the viability of agricultural operations by reducing impacts from prairie dogs on irrigated lands. We appreciate the challenging question - the Master Plan Update gives BPR a chance to have these difficult conversations with the community and update our goals and strategies to better serve the entire community through parks and recreation. Thanks, Morgan and Regina

Given that a recent petition amongst neighbors near the Boulder Reservoir showed 100% were against a liquor license at the new reservoir facility, why does Parks and Recreation continue to push for a liquor bar at the rez?

Archived

Thank you for your question. Our partners at the Boulder Reservoir, Driftwind Restaurant, have decided to withdraw their liquor license application. Together, we will focus this first year on building great experiences and the positive relationships that will allow us to fulfill the community vision created with this project.

Being Good Neighbors

We are working on a draft Good Neighbor Agreement that will spell out our communication commitments and a process to address input from the neighbors moving forward. That agreement will be circulated for comment and then we will host a virtual meeting to hear suggestions on the agreement. Also, in the works and planned for warmer days is a sound check – where we will announce the testing of various sound levels associated with the new partnership and test their impacts at various points.

Communications Moving Forward

We will continue to send emails to the list of community members that have requested to receive reservoir restaurant updates. If someone would like to sign up for this list to ensure they get our communications directly, please email Boulder Reservoir Manager, Stacy Cole at coles@bouldercolorado.gov. Thanks!
With the addition of a whole contingent of new tennis players (according to the Physical Activity Council, between the third quarter of 2019 and the third quarter of 2020 national participation in tennis increased 49%), and the fact that tennis courts now support a whole new population of pickleball players, and the fact that even pre-pandemic, the Boulder Valley School District was locking the public out of some of their formerly available courts) Boulder tennis and pickleball players are facing a critical shortage of available public courts. This wouldn’t have been such an issue if Boulder Parks and Rec had been at least occasionally added a few courts to the mix over the last two decades. But that hasn’t been the case, and now that oversight by the City is catching up to all the taxpayers who have tennis or pickleball as their sport of choice. According to one of Parks and Rec’s own surveys back in 2014, tennis courts were second in terms of usage of all types of fields and courts in the Parks system -- and that has surely increased by now. In light of that, I am wondering if the City has started in on plans to construct a new racquet sports center on a par with Quali Courts in Longmont or the Arvada Tennis Center down in Jefferson County? And sorry, I'm not sure if this is more of a comment or a question. :)

Thanks for your interest in the tennis and pickleball courts in Boulder. Staff certainly understand the concerns and questions related to the quantity of courts as well as the condition of those courts. Like many sports and activities we have seen a dramatic increase in usage throughout the pandemic and are evaluating the capacity and availability of the courts given the demand for tennis and pickleball. Staff are currently assessing the conditions and prioritizing maintenance needs and resurfacing options that can be complete this year. Additionally, staff are actively working with BVSD staff to determine an approach for some of the shared courts between the city and school district at various locations in Boulder. Finally, through this current master plan process, we will be completing an updated analysis to understand the need for more courts as well as investment strategies and partnerships that might support new court development. We appreciate your continued participation in the process and will provide regular updates. Thanks!

Are there plans to build more tennis courts? Between COVID and the rising popularity of pickleball, it's harder to get a court. Some days, I drive to the closest 4 courts, and still don't find one. It's an inexpensive sport that all sorts of people can access. It's just the cost of a racquet (always some to be found used) and tennis balls. It's an ideal socially-distanced sport, and it could keep some people off of the busy trails! Thanks!

Why can't Boulder figure out how to fund a public tennis facility, similar to the Apex Center in Arvada? The city courts are cracked and sprouting weeds. We haven't built a new one in many years. The renovations to Knollwood Courts and Martin Park are much appreciated but with the boom in tennis and pickleball, we desperately need more courts. Not all of us can afford, or even want, to join a private club.

Tennis/PickleBall: Pickleball is taking off just about everywhere. Lots of older people play and even some younger ones. Additionally, tennis has seen a massive uptick in participation over the last 10 years and as an excellent Covid activity, the last year has seen it go up dramatically as well. I often find it difficult to get a court at Centennial and other venues and have to "travel around" to find one with my group. I'd love to see the tennis community supported more with 1) A new large venue with ~8 courts; 2) Improved maintenance [nets, cracks, windscreens] at existing courts; and 3) Expanded capacity for pickleball as they encroach (understandably) on PaddleBall and tennis is in places like NBRC. What is the city's plan wrt these 3 items???? Thanks!

Why Boulder's tennis courts are in such bad shape: large cracks, broken net posts and nets, small rocks and debris on the courts? I've seen many times rollerblading and skateboarding taking place on the tennis courts. Boulder needs more courts for tennis and pickleball players, and maintaining existing courts. Arvada did it. Why can't Boulder follow the suit?

It would be great to see some indoor tennis and pickleball courts in Boulder. Pickleball is one of the fastest growing racket sports in the country and is great for people of all ages. Tennis is also great for all ages and there simply are not enough public courts throughout Boulder, especially in the winter months. An indoor facility would be a great addition to our city's recreational resources.

Why have tennis facilities been neglected for the last 20 years? My understanding is that no new courts have been built in this time, despite an explosion of demand through league play, pickle ball, junior coaching programs and generally increased usage. Tennis is a great sport for all ages and more importance should be assigned to it in the future.

Q2  "Community Health and Wellness": Why is this important?

Anonymous  2/01/2021 03:20 PM

Many of our parks have been under a great deal of stress given uptick of meth addicted unhoused transients. The last clean up near the library found over 1,000 needles adjacent to the playground along with hundreds of pounds of other trash, human waste etc. Our children can no longer enjoy these spaces and many in the community no longer feel safe in our parks built for all to enjoy.

Anonymous  2/02/2021 07:55 AM

It fosters a lively community

Anonymous  2/03/2021 08:45 AM

To join our community together.

Anonymous  2/03/2021 09:42 AM

Parks and recreation facilities are so important to people's physical and mental well-being, as the pandemic as so aptly demonstrated.

Anonymous  2/03/2021 10:55 AM

Healthy and happy citizens should have lower costs. Hopefully this is relevant to healthcare and crime.

Anonymous  2/03/2021 12:49 PM

The rec centers are dated and need maintenance - same for many parks. Equipment needs upgrading and the bring the best of what's available to Boulder. Surrounding communities have nicer facilities.

Anonymous  2/03/2021 01:30 PM

Parks provide health and wellness benefits which have been really stressed during these times.

Anonymous  2/03/2021 01:39 PM

I want a healthy and vibrant community

Anonymous  2/03/2021 03:35 PM

Studies continually show that exercise is essential to all aspects of wellness. The programs provided by parks and rec are an important asset to the community.

Anonymous  2/03/2021 03:37 PM

If you are not providing the services needed by the community, then you have failed in your mission.

Anonymous  2/03/2021 03:49 PM

Classically underfunded and the COVID19 situation has highlighted this issue. Also builds mental wellness and personal resilience.

Anonymous  2/03/2021 03:50 PM

I think this is the primary goal for any Parks and Recreation Dept and is especially important now as Covid has impacted the mental and physical health of so many in our community.

Much of what I enjoy is being with the community. Especially, playing tennis year round. I would love to see a winter bubble over the rec center courts. There is a great demand for tennis in the winter.

The health and wellness of community members is a foundation for healthy relationships and social harmony. It's also very wise economically, since healthy and happy people miss fewer days of work, and require fewer trips to the doctor's office. Also, kids who have access to a vibrant recreation center will be less likely to engage in physically or emotionally destructive behaviors.

With the pandemic limiting many options, parks and rec has offered one consistent way for me to stay active; I didn't use facilities much in the past, but have used it more than ever now. Outdoors spaces have also played a huge role in mental health this past year.

We have certainly seen the importance of health in the last year - and the city parks and recreation services have been a vital lifeline for our community, providing not only physical opportunities to stay healthy but more importantly mental health and wellness. Life is so much more enjoyable when each person is healthy and able to engage in the fun and challenges of our lives.

It's a big part of Boulder culture. Even though some private companies may be able to deliver same services, they often are at a higher cost, which can cut out middle and lower class families from being able to participate. And the Y doesn't always offer same options.

I visited and used the city parks more in 2020 than I ever have in the 13 years I have lived in Boulder because of the coronavirus pandemic. I felt visiting the parks improved my mental health during the Stay at Home order and I used them for activities that I hadn't before such as picnics and meeting places.

The community needs to be served regardless of age, income level, religious or ethnic background, and self identity. Ensuring public health through free or low cost options (parks, facilities, programs) is taking care of the community.

Healthy, happy, tight-knit communities are safer for everyone.
Parks and open space are important to our city’s health. We need to get outside, have access to public parks, spaces, and facilities like the rec centers at a low cost to maintain physical and mental health. Our family regularly uses parks and playgrounds all throughout the city, as well as open spaces and mountain trails.

Financially it makes sense to promote health and wellness and it’s the right thing to do!

Helping “all” citizens stay well seems like the highest priority for a municipal parks & rec department. It contributes to quality of life, decreases health care costs, attracts and retains residents.

It’s an investment in the health and wellness of the community population. The healthier the community is, the fewer healthcare resources they may need ongoing, this is a direct benefit to society as a whole.

Across the nation, there is an aging population boom. Boulder is no exception. The fastest growing sport in the nation, Pickleball, is a favorite of the aging population. I am a long-time Boulder resident who also travels a fair amount, and am frustrated and disappointed at the lack of support and encouragement that the city of Boulder provides for this popular sport that provides fitness, social, emotional support to a large community.

I hope P and R uses accurate numbers on demographics of Boulder citizens (do not include the university students who have their own recreation facilities) to determine who are the citizens to be served by the department, now and in the future. Older people are a key and growing demographic, and equipment and services for them are key to keeping them mentally and physically fit and able to capably participate as citizens.

It builds a healthy community which benefits all of us.

Quality of life, long-term investment and improvement in our community

I believe this is core to what we do.

Health and wellness is essential to a balanced life.

I would adjust this concept to say that I believe it is important for Parks and Recreation to specifically make wellness easy and equitable. Those who have flexible jobs and the privilege of time and childcare to maintain their health need help to maintain their health and wellbeing and no one but the City has the foresight and interest in addressing this, and should to ensure the health of our ENTIRE community.
That is the reason I love Boulder. So many opportunities to maintain my health, fitness, wellness, nutrition, spiritual and racing needs.

Seems like this is the primary reason for having a Parks & Rec department in the first place, and therefore is a core priority.

Making use of the existing facilities at full capacity

Just before covid hit, there were plans to expand pickleball availability. I would love to see these happen

We are fortunate to live in Boulder and many of us live here because of access to open space and outdoor recreational opportunities. This supports all of us live more healthy lives.

It's always about safety...

Keeps me young in body and mind to help my WORLD

Without health, you have nothing but expense

Access to well managed rec centres, open spaces, expressing a priority for caring for mind, body and spirit and cultivating wellness, strength and stewardship for community health and wellbeing. Why have a community if it not healthy for you/us?

more trails = more community outdoor options = healthier community

A lot cheaper to keep people healthy than to try to fix them with the medical system. They're also happier and less stressed, both of which lead to better decisionmaking in every other area of their lives and their public policy preferences.

Increase hours of rec centers and add a rec center to boulder

During COVID times, so important for ParkRec to support community to gather in safe way, support fitness and outdoor activity, support people meeting new people

Parks and Rec spaces and facilities offer an opportunity to maintain personal and community wellness which is an investment that pays dividends across many facets of Boulder.
I think there are services the city does not directly provide that are also important for the city to fund/support. Gym and swimming pools are not everyone's ideal recreation in Boulder. The arts are important as well and should be totally supported by the city however you can.

Outdoor recreation is a core component of a healthy community. Parks and recreation services and facilities promote this important community value.

Health and wellness contribute to one's sense of purpose. Providing access to health and wellness gives people the opportunity to have a well-lived life.

Boulder is known for its outdoor recreation and our parks are a key part of the health and wellness of our community.

P&R opportunities are critical to developing and maintaining a healthy population. During COVID isolation, recreational opportunities have been more important than ever.

The Rec Center offers programs that are supportive of my husband and my health, our friends and our special need daughter. The Expand program is for people with disabilities, like Sophia (now 26 years old). There is no other program like Expand in Louisville, Lafayette, Longmont or Westminster. People come from all these areas to participate in the valuable program which offers physical, social and cognitive programs to the disabled. Sophia has personally enjoyed their Basketball league, Swim program and Ski program for years. She also participates in their monthly dances, their reading programs and many other activities. It's become like a second home for her.

It can't be a white washed town. Housing prices are already too expensive, teachers can't even afford to live here. Your 'affordable housing' is in the middle of a highway. And with the high costs of living, what are they getting to live here. Not worth it

It's one of the reasons we choose to live in Boulder.

This is the purpose of the Parks and Rec department. Services that support community health and wellness.

This is one of the main reasons Boulder is a great place to live.

It's very important that our cities provide respite from the busyness of our lives through recreational activities and parks within the city for rest and relaxation.

Health and Wellness isn't just sports and outdoor activities. The Arts creates Health and Wellness.
This seems like the core purpose of a parks and rec dept.

Provide safe access to: - beautiful outdoor spaces where everyone can enjoy nature - world-class exercise facilities places for community to gather together, and make art or enjoy nature

It's what makes Boulder and Colorado so special. We are health focused and want to live with that as a focus.

Our neighborhoods are key to a vibrant and healthy community, making it affordable to all is key.

the arts, sports and cultural events that have all suffered from COVID need to be supported to revive our sense of community, stimulate the economy and provide culture for visitors and locals

Isn't that what parks and rec is about?

Especially in light of the mental and physical toll that COVID-19 has had on so many of us, post-pandemic health and wellness should be made a public priority in order to recover as a community. Having access to amazing outdoor recreation has been a godsend during this time, but post-pandemic, there will be so many people who will need and want to engage in getting healthy mentally and physically!

This implies a healthy environment and healthy citizens follow from that Maintaining the health of our community is one of the most important reasons for having a recreation facilities.

People need access to quality programs that support engaged sports, classes, etc. for quality of life.

Because if we maintain a healthy and happy community, interactions between people are better.

It is so much of what makes Boulder so special and livable-- a community that values health and wellness and that supports it.

Greater physical and mental creates a more productive society, lowers healthcare costs and substance abuse.

It's important because the facilities promote healthy behavior of residents.

Boulder is synonymous with an outdoor, healthy lifestyle. My primary engagement with my city is through recreational facilities - trails, tennis courts, parks, open spaces and the rec centers. Supporting and preserving these assets is the most important way that Boulder can add value for me as a taxpaying citizen.

Using facilities, parks and programs besides keeping people fit, allows social wellness by meeting and getting to know others I otherwise would not have met.

We have lots of Park and Rec space - let's use it to encourage people to spend time outdoors as much as possible for physical health, mental health, and overall wellness.

It has the potential to make people happier or more content.

Health and Wellness to me is a fundamental - building strong healthy and engaged citizens.

Access to safe and relevant health and wellness is vital to community.

Parks & Rec exists for the wellness of the community. It's where we go to work out, swim, exercise.

The ability to get outside and enjoy nature is one of the things that makes Boulder unique and great.

healthy citizens make a healthy community

As a senior, I hope that pickleball will be expanded. It is a great way for seniors to get exercise and socialize, both extremely important to aging well and happily. While I really appreciate the south and north boulder courts where lines and nets have been provided, It seems time to install more as well as make them "designated Pickleball courts" with permanent nets. We hope you seriously consider this in the 5-year planning.

Wellness is critical to happiness.
Because it is the purpose of the entire system

Parks are essential in fostering better physical and mental health

Being healthy is more than just fitness. Building community is critical. Having places to find community should be a hallmark of any parks and rec organization.

Our company as a whole likes to promote health and fitness so this is a value of ours.

A healthy community is a happy community.

It's important, because as someone who manages and takes care of our parks, there's even increasing instances of dangerous situations stemming from drug use, homelessness, and lack of enforcement. It's frustrating to see all the money being allocated towards building new facilities when the city can't even police it's public parks to keep them safe. When there's rot in the foundation, there's rot in the whole system. Look at the creek path through downtown: does that represent a "Vibrant and healthy community"? Where are the resource allocations for dealing with that? When you step off any trail or bike path throughout the city, you're likely to find piles of trash, human excrement, and drug paraphernalia. Does that represent a "vibrant and healthy community"? There seems to be a large disconnect between the values the city extolls and reality on the ground.

I am 68 and have a health issue that is affecting my mobility. Pain makes it hard to walk, but walk I must, and taking my dog at Coot and Twin Lakes is so rewarding for both of us. People are friendly and dogs are well-behaved. It's my main form of exercise, and a precious resource.

Boulder is aging, we need to keep Seniors active, and have age appropriate programs to do so.

Having opportunities for seniors to stay active will ensure independence and health in an otherwise vulnerable population.

A healthy community helps us all appreciate well being for all. This includes mental health and an ability to enjoy peaceful environments.

Government has a role in preserving the natural environment. Preserving the natural environment keeps humans healthy.

Boulder has a large community of tennis players/enthusiasts (in the thousands) -- why has this health-generating activity been encouraged in other communities and not Boulder? Our family and many others rely on parks and baseball facilities for much of our outdoor activities

Quality parks, recreation and especially outdoor space is vital to physical and emotional wellness.

Health should be important to all and as a community, we should support a healthy active lifestyle.

We need to be outside. I have worked as a volunteer coach in multiple youth sports and strongly believe in youth sports as a positive experience for kids that can help them as individuals and help decrease social and cultural barriers among participants. When kids have teammates, bonds form that help to cross cultural divides.

That's why we live here!

The community needs a safe place to enjoy nature. A family oriented park to expand family participation and enjoyment.

Reduces stress and crime

Nurtures the physical & emotional health of Boulder citizens.

We need to respect the residents and their needs

I think "Community Health and Wellness" is a fundamental value/function.

I love that the rec offers trial classes and one-time events that provide an option to try something new. I'd like to see that sort of work continue.
People are out in our parks more than ever. I hope the parks stay clean and green. I hope that there are park enhancements in some of our older parks; that Gunbarrel gets a city park as planned and that the Valmont South regional park is funded.

I hope that I can enjoy parks and open space and bike paths without seeing bums, meth heads, drug addicts, and homeless camps. I hope fines and jail time is mandatory for these crimes.

The environment of Boulder will be a place for all people to feel healthy and well.

Safe and clean paths. (No CHOP hangouts along the paths.). Clean parks and rec centers.

An indoor tennis facility or bubble

I hope that serious consideration goes into providing dedicated pickleball courts to our community.

That many great programs with quality instructors are offered

I hope that everyone who lives in boulder can grow like I did and have the space and area to find health and wellness. It's so important to have enough health and wellness resources that this is possible. So that there is time for people to open swim or lap swim, so that there are interesting classes to learn about fitness, so that there are enough parks that it's not too crowded.

Additional trails especially for mountain biking which would lead to a lot less driving and emissions.

Continued classes on health education (nutrition, weight management, healthy back, healthy heart). A full slate of exercise classes for all ages. Classes and activities that offer connection to others.

That everyone can maintain a healthy lifestyle

Promotion of programs that lift up community wellness in ways and offerings that differ from private sector. Either more affordable or more welcoming.

Places along the creek familys can go

Boulder needs to figure out a way to make residents feel safe in all the parks and continue to provide all the opportunities they do.

To see more people gather for activities after the pandemic
Add more platform courts as they target a many different demographics in our community!

Assist the community in moving past the pandemic. Adjusting to the changes that have and will still occur for people post-pandemic.

The broad financial base of Boulder and its value on fitness should provide the opportunity for world class public fitness facilities.

Please add more Pickleball lines to existing tennis courts. (Palo Park Courts on 30th street is ideal). Change one existing tennis court to a permanent Pickleball court (2 PB courts from one tennis court) with permanent Pickleball nets.

Easy access to affordable programs to promote health & wellness. More/better platform tennis courts, maybe at the EBRC, with lights & possible heaters underneath the courts to melt the snow.

Our outdoor spaces are one of the most vital ways (perhaps THE most) vital component for health and wellbeing. Our Parks and Rec make spending time outdoors safe, accessible and welcoming and maintained. I hope Boulder Parks and Rec continues it’s EXACT mandate and focus from the 2012 Master Plan.

More and better maintained tennis courts to accomodate the boom in interest and participation in this wonderful sport.

I hope that a indoor 50m pool can be built, Gunbarrel would be a great location for this!

Restore the parking in front of the Boulder Reservoir so the community has access.

All elders will have avenues to increase their health and well-being.

Continued investment in the pools & Boulder Rez - keeping fee’s reasonable for the general public.

One HOPE is that the City of Boulder will not continue its trend of RE-PURPOSING tennis courts for the use of pickle ball.... this diminishes an already limited resource. Most tennis players RESPECT and APPRECIATE pickle ball... but let's get them their own courts!

I'd like to see more tennis courts converted to allow pickleball play as well. Dedicated, lighted pickleball courts would meet the needs of more players, and the city could host tournaments as a revenue generator.

Improved maintenance of parks, especially baseball
We hope the BPR can continue to provide access to modern, clean and affordable facilities for exercising, sports, and family fun.

More human interaction and activities

Expanded use

More family oriented, organized activities.

Everyone has access and feels comfortable

1) Well planned expansion and maintenance of parks, multi-use pathways and hiking trails. 2) Balanced swimming, fitness and sports opportunities and facilities for the Boulder population of all ages. 3) Expansion of available pickleball courts and accessibility, both indoor and outdoor.

Maintain what we do have and build on it

Policy and implementation to maximize "Community Health and Wellness" as many Boulderites as possible.

Many of our parks have been under a great deal of stress given uptick of meth addicted unhoused transients. The last clean up near the library found over 1,000 needles adjacent to the playground along with hundreds of pounds of other trash, human waste etc. Our children can no longer enjoy these spaces and many in the community no longer feel safe in our parks built for all to enjoy.

That competition keeps the timid away

Homeless people are bringing in more crime and drugs. If this is not addressed, then, people will stay away and will not support the parks.

Not enough resources. The City has disinvested in parks and recreation services (along with most other human services) over the last 10 years, which I think is a mistake.

I know that BPR has had to be flexible and creative in order to serve the community as they always have. I’m concerned that this is already incredibly challenging and will continue to be challenging throughout 2021 and beyond. I hope this flexibility and creativity will continue. I think community support (including City Council) will be key and sustained outreach & engagement opportunities could help with that. Sometimes people don’t know what they have till it’s gone. Some in our community may not realize how much BPR enhances their lives. I’m concerned that resources will continue to be stretched thin and BPR’s mission could be de-prioritized.

Obesity in adults, especially in children and other health factors are becoming more of an issue in the nation. We need to put an end to these types of issues that are in our direct control.

I worry about the sheer # of residents using the parks and facilities - crowded trails, full exercise classes, etc.

Post-pandemic: when I go back to South I see mostly old people there (I am 56). South is next door to Fairview and Southern Hills. I started a Friday workout routine with our now-15-year old son when he was 13; he and I would meet after school. There should be more young people using our services.

Concerned about isolation of individuals, created by our increased separation due to online work, schooling, and social media. Decreased activity and community because of these reasons.

mental health get members involved with others

Lack of offerings

Not changing with the needs and wants of the community

That some parks are under-loved and neglected and that others are over run.

Easy to focus on making parks and playgrounds safe and beautiful. Don't neglect some of the treasures - such as pottery lab.

That people won't utilize the parks to the extent they could be.

The support for our 50+ community is pathetic compared to other communities.

Over the past year, there has been a considerable increase in the use of our parks due to the pandemic. At this point, there's not reason to believe that this level of use won't continue. I fear that the safety issues mentioned above will only be exacerbated unless the city reprioritizes some of it's focus. With $16M in backlog repairs and maintenance, widespread layoffs throughout the parks department, and deep budget cuts, it seems increasingly irresponsible to be expanding facilities and programs without address these needs. Our parks are being "loved to death" and we're unable to keep up with the maintenance that this necessitates. Over-time, this has led to the situation...
we’re seeing throughout the park system: homeless encampments, trail-widening, human and dog waste throughout the city, erosion, asset destruction, vandalism, trash, violence, etc. If the city is trying to be a beacon on the hill for other municipalities to emulate, it’s falling far short of it’s goals. I’m concerned that with the focus on building new and flashy facilities and expanding public programs we’re neglecting a crucial foundation of the park system: the health and wellness of our parks, which it turn promotes the health and wellness of our community.

There were many moments when I saw families on the tennis courts, young twenties on the volleyball courts and frisbee golf course, older people on the pickleball courts - and I worry that once the tennis leagues start, that we will not have enough facilities for all of these people to just come out on a nice summer evening and play one of these sports together.

are forced to transition from tennis/racquetball to pickleball. The USA Pickleball Association (USAPA) has found that the sport has seen a 650 percent increase in members since 2013, and as of 2018 had 3.1 million players in the U.S. Sadly, Boulder's Parks and Recreation courts do not reflect this increase. The number of pickleball courts are woefully inadequate (7) to support Boulder's booming pickleball population. The outdated paradigm of tennis being king is still reflected in the disproportionate number of tennis vs. pickleball courts.

It feels like some of the facilities are falling behind our neighboring communities. Before the scott carpenter pool remodel, we would need to travel to adjacent communities for water park fun. We haven't been to Scott Carpenter yet, so hopefully it is fun. That type of remodel/refresh is needed! Similarly, sports field facilities in other communities seem more modern and easier to access, particularly parking.

Many of our parks have been under a great deal of stress given uptick of meth addicted unhoused transients. the last clean up near the library found over 1,000 needles adjacent to the playground along with hundreds of pounds of other trash, human waste etc. Our children can no longer enjoy these spaces and many in the community no longer feel safe in our parks built for all to enjoy.

Protecting investments is a very basic but important priority to me. We don't want to start adding on to parks, facilities, and programs without being able to upkeep what we already have.

Anonymous 2/03/2021 02:52 PM
Focusing on "what's next" can be more exciting, but to the detriment of the experience of existing assets and programs. To me this is a necessary foundation before looking to "what else can we do".

Anonymous 2/03/2021 04:56 PM
While Scott Carpenter pool is new, I believe it will require maintenance to keep it as amazing as it currently is. The same with other rec facilities, they are meeting my needs as they are and I'd like them to stay that way, but recognize that with all things time can have a negative impact if resources are not appropriated to ensure proper maintenance. I like the parks we have and don't feel a pressing need for more.

The city needs to maintain our parks and facilities. You can see by how the city poorly maintains our roads and infrastructure they taking care of what we have is not important to the city. It’s important that the police round up all the transients around town and put them in jail.

Trails have suffered from overuse during pandemic. Users are stepping off trail to avoid others leading to slope erosion. There is no data suggesting this reduces spread of COVID or that momentary proximity of masked persons in an outdoor environment is a transmission pathway.

Anonymous
2/03/2021 05:17 PM

I have lived in Boulder for 33 years and am deeply saddened to watch our lovely parks and civic spaces become tent cities. I commend the police and public health departments for their occasional sweeps of the areas, but this constant activity (the camping and the sweeps) deters our residents and young families from using these spaces that are paid for with tax dollars. These spaces are gems and it should be the city’s highest priority to take care of what we have, so these spaces are accessible to EVERYONE and not just the campers.

Anonymous
2/04/2021 05:41 AM

Like I said, with more people there’s more use and more use means more things wear out, we definitely don’t want to destroy the things we already built.you can’t have nice spaces if you don’t take care of them.
We have a solid variety of existing parks and facilities and not maintaining would risk making them undesirable. I think of things like if I were to choose between a currently-in-vogue slack line or a timeless playground swing set, in 50 years, little kids will still be excited about the swing set.

Because Boulder Parks and Rec rule! This is part of the reason we chose to move to this community 20 years ago.

currently the trails I have used for many years have overcrowded parking lots and many more visitors. With more people generally comes more rules, which I don't want. I do want to improve the trailheads so that people don't have to park along roadsides, which destroys the habitat there.

Take care of the existing infrastructure is less expensive than building new

We cant afford to pay or build more if we cant take care of what we have Sustainability is the future, not growth.

Boulder has so many great parks and open spaces. With more people living here, they are being "love to death" and you can see signs of this overuse. Boulder needs to figure out a way to maintain the infrastructure they have to accommodate the number of people that use the parks.

We have a beautiful park system. Let's take care of the physical structures first. Let's add addition lands where there is opportunity, but not forget to maintain what we have Existing parks and facilities see a lot of visitors and are important parts of the community. It is important to continue to maintain what we currently have while expanding trails and facilities on existing properties.

because Many trails are a mess. A lot of deferred maintenance has accumulated over the years.

Most cost effective way to deliver existing services.

We have a lot of parks, but some of them need more services and we should make repairs. Chautauqua is over-used, but at least has a bathroom. If other parks and trailheads had working bathrooms, people could spread out a little more.

Maintaining the trails, preventing erosion.
We are stewards of this beautiful city and it's our duty to preserve and share it with future citizens.

We have great amenities - I don't think it's about expansion, it's more about upholding.

We have already made these investments and need to ensure their upkeep (as long as they are still viable.)

We don't need any more if we can't keep up with what we have. Working on homelessness cleanup is all involved in that

"More" is not always the best answer, yet is often what people reach for first. We have parks and facilities that need maintenance to remain fully usable, much less to maximize their potential.

Because we have a lot of great resources already that need to be maintained- the trail systems, keeping bike path and creek areas and library areas safe from vagrants, etc. Let's make sure we can protect what we have before investing in something else.

I think it's self explanatory. We need to maintain what we have and not let it deteriorate, get abused, or neglected.

America's greatest asset is it's natural beauty and open space. I feel it's critical to human wellness to preserve access to parks. These are frequently the first exposure children have to nature, and that experience can change their life.

Keeping people healthy and engaged is ethically the right thing to do and it keeps your community thriving.

Open space is still very restrictive to public use. Opening more "Open Space" to the public who owns it, would be my top priority.

If we don't fully support the facilities and services we already have and they fall below standards, that is a waste of money first, and then the community won't use them and will also become upset.

If you allow people in an area to recreate, you must plan for trash and bathroom facilities adequately.

Boulder's parks and open space are the crown jewels of Boulder. We must at least take care of them

Increased visitation to public spaces has caused negative impacts, which requires ongoing attention: (1) maintaining trails and other outdoor areas for safety, cleanliness, signage, etc.; (2) restricting access to sensitive ecosystems and habitats; and (3) patrolling public spaces to ensure compliance of all users.

There is going to be very little opportunity (if any) to change locations of the Rec. Centers or expand them. Same with Scott and Spruce. Same with our Parks. Making sure the facilities we have are top-notch upgraded and well-maintained has to be the foundation from which you build from.

Anonymous

Climate change is going to make maintaining green spaces more expensive. We need to preserve our municipal parks as oases of green in the brown landscape. We also need to invest in some xerixcape -- using drought tolerant plantings and newly developed tougher grasses. This will be an investment in durable long-term parks. Our South recreation center needs to be replaced with a larger, more modern facility with a large warm water pool - such as that built by Louisville and Westminster. The current facility is worn out and behind the times.

We're so lucky in Boulder to have our Community Rec Centers and also our out-door pools in the summer. I've been using these facilities for decades and they're always busy and full of people of all ages. Parks and Rec has done a great job of keeping these facilities clean, inviting and up to date. These are the heart and soul of Parks and Rec, in my opinion. My top priority would be to continue to invest in these facilities and the programs associated with them.

We have three wonderful, public recreation centers that many communities in the Eastern US and Midwest do not have. You have to join a private club which does not seem equitable nor foster community health and engagement.
SBRC and Harlow Platt Park have been forgotten to cater to all the yuppies that have moved to North Boulder.

Keeping up with the quality level of other communities

The City should protect the taxpayers' prior investments and prioritize maintenance of what's here rather than construction/acquisition of something new.

Keeping the facilities up and running

It's more financially responsible to improve and update than build from scratch.

Support more Pickleball Courts.

as long as it's still valued we should maintain it

For example, Parks and Rec leases the Pottery Lab to Studio Arts Boulder. The Pottery Lab is a beloved institution ably run by Studio Arts Boulder. Parks and Rec should SUPPORT Studio Arts Boulder and subsidize its operation of the Pottery Lab for the benefit of Boulder citizens.

Great effort, planning, dinero has gone into creating what we have. Seems important to continue the care of what exists,

The climate is changing and the economy is distressed. We need to focus on making sure what we have is well taken care of for now in the future. Not building, buying and expanding every option for recreation.

The Expand program was one of the best in the country. With forced retirements and people being squeezed out there is not near the leaders and coaches there had been. Our IDD population already underserved has lost an incredibly valuable program.

If we don't, then it will cost more in the future

We have courts, field lines, etc if we keep in good shape they will be around longer

This is a common problem, world wide: Somehow money is found to create a nice new thing, but no money is allocated to maintain it. The result is a very sad thing: A monument to government failure.
The increase demand on the City of Boulder's parks has increased at least 10 fold over the past 15 years. I would recommend that we charge people who don't live in Boulder a service fee to use the parks that those of us who live in Boulder pay for.

As building age, upkeep is important to maintain its clean and useable areas.

I love Boulder for what it is, and I'd hate to lose cherished landmarks/opportunities.

Boulder's rec centers are great. Not much more is needed, they should be kept functional.

It's easy to get distracted by a shiny new idea, but we have a wealth of current park and rec assets that will serve us well if we care for, maintain, and upgrade them. The significant expansion of Scott Carpenter Pool is a thrilling improvement of a current asset.

Would not want to lose the Pottery Lab or classes already offered there or at the rec centers. The support of BMOCA is also important.

We should optimize on what we have first before making overly ambitious new goals.

Budgeting enough funds to keep parks in good working condition is important.

If we do not protect and support what we now have, what hope is there is there in the future to be able to bring those programs back.

I value the recreation opportunities we have (centers), as well as the Pottery Lab, and our wonderful parks. I think there should be investment in repair and maintenance.

We have one of the greatest park and rec systems in the US. It is worth taking care of.

The things that we have can last a long time so far as there is funding to maintain the facilities and spaces. To me, it is important for us not to get distracted by the shiny, new thing, but instead preserve what we have already invested in.

The Pottery Lab is an iconic art studio that is important to this community.

Because what we have is awesome and can be even better, and if it's well taken care of it provides resilience in case of hard times.
We simply don't have any ground to lose. Boulder has a reputation for being a very healthy and active community. However, it doesn't always live up to that reputation. Access to trails is becoming more limited by overcrowding and parks (Eben G. Fine and Scott Carpenter Park, for example) are becoming more like vagrant camps than parks.

Rather than expanding too much, I'd prefer to see the arks we do have improved and minimally expanded, where needed.

our parks and rec centers and open space are some of Boulder's most valuable assets!

We are blessed with extraordinary facilities and land. Hopefully usage will continue to grow as in the last year. There are many costs to fund that growth. Aggressively plan for them. Maintenance forward rather than fixing up the damage.

There are few places like Boulder in the world, so it is attracting more and more people. As that happens, we risk overrunning the things that make our incredible town unique (festivals, open spaces, celebration of food and art), with mundane, soul-less, generic establishments that strip Boulder of all that makes it what it is. We need to protect Boulder's escense.

There are so many existing programs, like the pottery lab, that are a viable part if our community.

P&R has a tremendous investment in spaces, facilities, programs, and goodwill. These must not be allowed to deteriorate.

We have some wonderful facilities in the city of boulder, the 3 recreation centers, senior centers, pottery lab, parks, bike park, and so on. ensuring that the monies and resources and programs that people so heavily enjoy/use is important as to not waste what we have

The Rec Center offers programs that are supportive of my husband and my health, our friends and our special need daughter. The Expand program is for people with disabilities, like Sophia (now 26 years old). There is no other program like Expand in Louisville, Lafayette, Longmont or Westminster. People come from all these areas to participate in the valuable program which offers physical, social and cognitive programs to the disabled. Sophia has personally enjoyed their Basketball league, Swim program and Ski program for years. She also participates in their monthly dances, their reading programs and many other activities. It's become like a second home for her.

I find that maintenance of existing public parks and facilities is important to ensure longevity in the things we already have access to. It is important to me that parks/trails/etc continue to be maintained so that generations to Anonymous 2/10/2021 10:42 AM I love Scott Carpenter and EBCC for swimming, and walking the dog in parks, so keeping these facilities and city parks open and safe is important to me.

Anonymous 2/10/2021 10:42 AM I do not want our assets falling into disrepair. Some assets, like playground features, have a high price tag for repair/replacement that our operating budget cannot absorb.

Anonymous 2/10/2021 10:43 AM Infrastructure and investment in the great programs and facilities we already have.

Anonymous 2/10/2021 10:48 AM We have amazing facilities that see increased use year over year. As a result, a focus needs to be on caring for existing facilities.

Anonymous 2/10/2021 10:49 AM It seems common sense. If you don't take care of what you have, then pretty soon you won't have it any more. And, a stich in time saves 9. Or an ounce or prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Anonymous 2/10/2021 11:04 AM Taking care of what Boulder has is important because Boulderites live among a physical environment that is worth saving in the face of relentless development.

Anonymous 2/10/2021 11:23 AM If it works, don't break it. I have been associated with the Pottery Lab since 1972 when I came here to go to graduate school in Ceramics at CU Boulder. I am no longer associated with CUBoulder, but I still have connections (through guest teaching and firings) with the Pottery Lab at 1010 Aurora. Children that I taught in the early 70s have sent their children to the Lab to take classes. The Pottery Lab is a well loved institution with a depth of history in Boulder.

sustain and support the Boulder Pottery Lab and Studio Arts Boulder to not loose what we have already in place in terms of parks and rec, arts and culture

To avoid waste on new programs while old ones may need more help to continue.

Preservation of historic architecture and the park lands we have both matter a lot to preserve the positive quality of life in Boulder.

We have to start where we are- before we stretch anywhere else- make sure we are caring for what we have.

Sustain Boulder's infrastructure, offering (parks and rec), and be flood ready

This community has made a sizable investment over the years. This investment needs to be protected.

The pottery lab is a wonderful place where people of all ages can come together to learn and grow.

A community where the "old" parks are falling apart but the "new" are sparkly and new is inherently short sighted and inequitable. I'm having trouble avoiding just saying "duh...this is obvious"

We need to maintain what we already have because it is partly what makes Boulder wonderful

I think Boulder already does an amazing job of providing a wide range of recreation options, many of which are well maintained and state-of-the art. It is what I value most about living here, and so I feel it is important that resources not be turned away from these amazing assets so that we can maintain what makes Boulder special.

I know you outsource the Pottery Lab, so this may not apply --- But the firehouse on the hill is in epic lab and an amazing resource. I miss it a lot and gave an unglazed pot sitting on my shelf at home. :-(

We have world-class facilities. It would be a shame to lose them to neglect and much more expensive to replace them.

Taking care of what we have and utilize what we have. Its folks are actively using classes, rec, etc this shows current community value/ preferences.

I am thinking of the pottery lab. This is practically a Boulder Heritage Sight, it needs to continue and be supported. Not all people recreate physically, I have seen access to less served individuals (disabled, elderly, youth and elderly combined, etc.) in this vital and precious resource.

Anonymous 2/10/2021 09:14 PM

Anonymous 2/11/2021 08:23 AM

Boulder is blessed with incredible natural beauty and we have prioritized open spaces and parks thru taxation. We need to protect and maintain what we have and educate our citizens and visitors to love it and be good stewards.

Anonymous 2/11/2021 09:18 AM

The Natural Lands team has three fulltime staff members and one seasonal crew member that conduct a variety of integrated pest management, wildlife, and open space maintenance in all park zones and roughly 22 parks annually. This total does not include the roughly nine other Natural Land specific properties that we also conduct work on such as Area III, Little Dry Creek, and Aeromodel. Even though our team conducts work across the city in a variety of city parks, our team and work remain unknown, different, and undervalued. We have heard many times that “I never know what you guys do,” including from our director. We feel extremely removed from the department. For one, our team is not even listed on the main Parks and Recreation website, but other smaller and similar teams (such as Forestry) have a page. Even our specific work is so unknown that the very video promoting this master plan update has a blatant error. The video states “we are continuing our 18-year tradition of no pesticides or herbicides,” yet IPM makes up over 40% of our Natural Lands work plan and we share herbicides with the Forestry team who also use them to treat stumps. Because our team and work are unfamiliar, our needs are not met, and our properties are the lowest priority of the department. The properties that we manage are forgotten, underfunded, overused, and in need of major repair. In 2020, the six trail counters we have installed at the North Shore and Coot Lake received 840,000 detections. In the next one to two years, I believe that this number will surpass one million detections. The properties and infrastructure in their current state cannot handle this level of visitation. If the department continues to prioritize other projects over the major maintenance needs that must occur at Coot Lake and the North Shore, I am afraid that the area will experience serious resource and infrastructure degradation.

If anything, this past year has demonstrated that our parks are more important than ever before. We already have a robust and vibrant park system, but this increased usage by the public has stressed many parks and facilities. It's discouraging to see human excrement on the sides of trails, dog feces in our natural areas, drug paraphernalia on park benches, vandalism on our signs. We simply don't have the resources to keep up with these problems, and as these issues go unaddressed (or inadequately addressed), they compound over time. There's a $16M backlog in maintenance and repairs needed on existing facilities. The longer these repairs go undone, the more expensive they become.

Continuity. Connecting the past with the present with the future. Rather than revamp everything with the whims of "new", keep some of the older parks around, memories are connected to them. Parks and facilities are more than just grass and buildings, they tie people old and new to an area, young and old together. Stories are tied to these places.

With COVID, support more activities for active Seniors, Pickleball is the fastest growing sport for Seniors....need more outdoor courts.
First off, I believe the choice of themes here is reductive. Where's the theme for “adding to and improving on what we have”? Combine the fact that Boulder has a very physical population that's only getting more so, and the fact of constantly increasing growth on the Front Range, and it becomes clear that simply taking care of what we have won't cut it. How about growing in step with the population you serve? Just saying...

Have the funding necessary to keep current assets at is best. I think it is important for the safety of our community to keep playgrounds safe, and current grass, buildings in good shape. This includes administration buildings, etc.

Important to maintain our existing assets in a fairly built out city. More financially feasible to conduct regular maintenance and enhancements than to build from the ground up.

From a moral responsibility and from the standpoint of financial prudence it makes sense to take care of what we have.

A lot of the parks seem run down and have room for improvement. It would be great to incorporate better programming, culture and arts in the parks that we have. It would also be great to actually feel like a current park in Boulder is safe, but right now I can't name one I'd classify as such because of the homeless population. I'm a native and this has been something I even remember as a child. Look to Denver as a model. They are thriving centers for the community for sports, music and children. As someone who has lived close to a Denver park I can attest to the previous statement. I haven't ever felt threatened in a Denver park the way I have Boulder.

Especially important to preserve and keep from degrading our undeveloped public lands.

We have some great facilities, but they aren't all maintained. Many of the court surfaces are cracked and in disrepair.

Boulder has beautiful parks and they are well used by the community. They are a huge community asset.

I have loved the foothills environment west of Boulder for many years and see it as a resource that is struggling with overuse and accompanying vandalism, so would like to see more control on its maintenance.

increasing stress on Paraks and Rec centers is a fact of life. Better to use resources to maintain the high quality of each.

If we don't take care of what we have, we have wasted our money developing what we have in place. Perhaps we decide some part of what we have is no longer serving our needs - that is fine, and we should replace it with something that is more relevant.

We have public tennis courts in town that need to be maintained. Now that we are all trying to get out more and many of us don't have enough work perhaps we are all competing for the same courts in town. We have all made life long friendships on these public tennis courts and we need them to be available year round. We could use an indoor public tennis facility that is not controlled by the city tennis coach Gonzo but open to all on a first come first serve basis. Tennis is a sport you can play all of your life but we NEED a public indoor facility. Please consider putting a bubble on some existing tennis courts or commandeer a new venue for indoor public tennis.

Speaking from my direct experience, where I worked with the Parks and Rec dept and the staff at the North Boulder Rec Center to upgrade the lights on the Platform tennis courts, I have noticed that the sport is flourishing since then. People want quality facilities that are consistently maintained. In the case of the NBRC Platform Tennis lights, we actually paid for the new lights and installation by raising the money from Boulder Paddle League players as a gift to the city. And we were happy to do it as it has improved the experience for ALL those that play on the courts. We just hope that there is budgeting being committed for upcoming maintenance that the courts will need (ie. new screens in the next few years). A friend of mine, Brock Borman, has donated a tremendous amount of time to help keep the courts maintained as he has experience installing and maintaining platform courts. There are also a few others including myself who have donated many hours to those courts. However, we should not rely on the individual goodwill of our citizens to keep our public facilities maintained.

So the public can continue to access and enjoy while maintaining the beauty of parks and open spaces as well as facilities.
Maintain and improve our existing facilities and then enhance and expand where possible.

There is a great system in Boulder and it should be maintained to benefit all in Boulder.

We have a good park system that is currently often overrun with garbage from the large transient population. Clearly they need help, but finding needles on kids playgrounds is not ideal.

Na

Boulder has a lot in place. The investment in these areas need to be maintained

There are 2 tennis courts in complete disrepair on the corner of 30th and Colorado. Completely unusual event and an eye sore. Please help.

Our family and many others rely on parks and baseball facilities for much of our outdoor activities

Many tennis courts in our community have huge cracks & are almost unplayable. There are children who use them plus adults for league play & casual play for social time, exercise & fun.

We have decent facilities, but we must take care of them, maintain them, and refresh them.

We have a great parks system for a city of our size, and maintaining these systems is important to our citizens.

It's currently wasting and under managed. We waste too much money on trying to get more land through open space.

Some baseball facilities are run down - sprinklers systems don't work well (broken lines or aren't run enough during the hot season), weeds growing along fence line aren't mitigated, poor dugout shelter, dilapidated clubhouse/storage/snack shack.

To keep expenses down by needing to purchase new equipment/facilities that have not been mantained.

We have a great parks and rec department
We all need to take care of what we already have before we lust after more and more.

Many of the outdoor and indoor facilities need repair (tennis courts), improvement (markings for Pickleball). Let's fix what we have and set up a long term plan for maintenance and repair.

"Taking Care of What We Have" means not just maintenance, but also efficient utilization. Boulders facilities are highly used, in some cases they suffer from over-use.

I hope we have clean parks that are well maintained and free from trash, meth needles and other hazardous waste and that our City has the courage to address it.

That COVID hasn't interrupted the P and R budget too much that we are at a low level in this regards.

That we can keep the wild parks wild

That encampments would be removed and homeless connected to services more quickly. After many years in Boulder, we've stopped using parks because of crime, waste and illegal activities. For example, a friend’s first visit to Foothills Community Park for a short run resulted in her car window being smashed and purse being stolen. We also would like to see trash receptacles put back in parks where they were removed, even the mini parks. Dog walkers are putting their waste in private trash cans or just leaving in peoples yards and many people object to that.

I would like to see more trash and recycling cans in the parks. Also, I would like to see more Boulder creek trash removal.

Facilities and grounds that are consistently well-maintained.

Even more tennis courts!

Being able to maintain youth programs. Ideally, I would love some of our youth programs to be as good as private clubs so more low income youth are able to participate in high school sports

I’d like to see bathrooms at trailheads, better maps, playground improvements, more detailed information coming from the City (e.g. how much long is the Chautauqua playground rehab going to take?!). Also, how about more water and erosion control (e.g. a bioswale/nature trail on the south 1/3 of North Boulder Park could prevent having to deal with soggy/unusable grass and flooding).

Less focus on new facilities and activities for elite athletes, more on what we have now -- the neighborhood rec centers and parks, for example.
Getting rid of the birds at Viele lake park - the grass areas are unusable, disgusting smears on sidewalks (which I will say that the city does a pretty good job at clearing at least). The pond is full of scum, I'm guessing from the concentration of goose poop. It would be so nice if people could kayak on the lake. Other cities use cannons / scaring devices, can we do something? I loved loved the goats eating the noxious weeds (why did they not come back this summer when they restarted, they went to other cities?); maybe the guard llamas could scare the geese away.

Continued maintenance and improvement. For example, the Spruce Pool is really dated and doesn't have enough shallow area for young kids. We need pools with wade-in areas, splash pads like the new Scott Carpenter pool that was built and never fully opened (very frustrated by that), and more slides like the Broomfield water park.

That we preserve what we have for our grandchildren's grandchildren.

Expanded facilities to account for the bigger populations in Boulder now

A Trail from Boulder to Lyons.

In addition to the clubhouse and restaurant investment, I'd like to see improvements to the actual golf course itself. New sand traps and upgraded tee-boxes would go a long way to improve the course. This course is by far the worst municipal course in the front range. Bouldetites leave Boulder every day to go to courses in Louisville, Lafayette, Erie, Longmont, Broomfield, Westminster because those courses are more attractive and fun to play. The golf course seems to be the bastard child or parks and rec.

That you will plan ahead and budget for trash removal and port o potties where needed. This is especially true along the Bldr Creek Trail and above Eben G Fine Park. You cannot allow large numbers of people to recreate there and not provide adequate infrastructure. It happens every single year so there is no excuse for not planning for it!

They continue to bring joy to everyone

I would like to see more education that teaches people why it's so important to stay on marked trails---and not create social trails for convenience.

Our successors can enjoy what we have enjoyed

At this point in my life I’m a pretty fit senior, thanks in no small part to these classes. Prior to the COVID shutdown, I attended the Fit-For-Life (ZOOM) class at 10:30 am, MWF. There was always really good attendance at this class and we all agreed that these work-outs were having huge health benefits for us. Not only were we staying fit physically, but there were significant emotional benefits as well. Exercise is important in combating depression and anxiety for people of all ages, but also our class provided wonderful social support as well. A great side benefit was that we chatted before and after class and became an informal social support system for one another. Many of us Seniors are living alone and it can be a lonely time of life. Having our class to look forward to, and having the opportunity to hang out in the lobby after class was a real lifesaver. I hope in the future that you will continue to provide classes for Seniors and make it a priority to recruit instructors who enjoy working with us. |

Improving in-person fitness offerings

I hope that we will be able to update all 3 recreation centers with additional spaces, equipment and amenities.

Add more Pickleball Courts

we can add on to what we already have

Several years ago, the City stopped managing the Pottery Lab directly and gave a contract to Studio Arts Boulder to manage the lab instead. Studio Arts Boulder has done a great job managing the Pottery Lab, and the Parks and Rec should support that program by fully funding maintenance at that facility.

I’d like to see more pickle ball designated courts at all of the possible locations.

Adaptation when needed. Taking care of the present buildings and services seem important and also, being open to the changing needs of those constituents.

That we are successful in maintaining our access to open space

The Expand/therapeutic rec program will once again thrive and offer our IDD community athletics, social programming and key opportunities for friendship and sportsmanship.

Improve existing parks with a clear picture of the demographics of the neighboring areas (i.e. put in playgrounds only if there are significant number of children in neighborhood, or putting is facilities for seniors near where they live)

Utilizing existing create multi use course, fields

Trails in particular are getting a little rough in many places. Edge drop-offs on paved trails are an emblematic problem.

Have the people who don't live in Boulder pay to use our parks.

The rec centers are excellent and hopefully will be maintained well into the future

My hope for the future is a continuation of creating opportunities for Boulder folks to stop and slow down and appreciate their physical environment.
That the Pottery Lab in the old firehouse will continue to flourish and grow.

Studio Arts Boulder, which the pottery lab is part of hopes to build an new facility for all the arts soon, but will always utilize every square inch of our beloved lab on Aurora.

A cleaner Boulder Reservoir with safety improvements to enable more use of non-motorized waterfract.

Invest in existing programs like the pottery studio and keep it going. Programs at Chautauqua are great. Shore up the reservoir to make sure overuse doesn't ruin it.

Improved and enhanced amenities/facilities (Rec Centers, Playgrounds, etc).

That we will renovate and try to drawl in more local businesses in historic downtown Boulder, too many national chains have taken away the charm of Pearl Street.

return of sports, arts and parks and rec as above

The Pottery Lab needs to continue

I hope the parks become less crowded. I have lived in Boulder since '79 and the pandemic made the trails so much more crowded that it often did not feel safe to walk unless you had room to move off trail. I feel like visitors should be charged to help maintain our parks.

In this I would hope that if we have too much- we can let go of what is not needed.

Boulder showed us resilience in 2013 after the flood period we need to keep putting resources towards that improvement while supporting communities and small businesses in the area this also includes governmental offerings of parks and recreation.

That our current programs remain viable.

That the pottery lab continues providing wonderful experiences to all involved.
If/when the city decides that some part of the system should no longer be within the parks and rec department, I dearly hope that these assets can be turned over to non-profits who will continue their maintenance. A fine example of this is the Pottery Lab...which continues on even though P&R no longer runs it. Keep up that good work!

Use existing space/courts to provide more services for residents. Pickleball is the fastest growing sport in America. There were always full courts (indoors) with people waiting to play for Drop In Pickleball at the Rec Centers before Covid. There is definitely a need for more Pickleball in this community. Also, this sport has a much higher age group which benefits Seniors.

That there can be a roaming ranger around the reservoir that isn't necessarily focused on the water body of the reservoir, but on the land surrounding the reservoir. As the Boulder Reservoir is a very important resource for the City it makes sense that it should be protected with support from staff with appropriate authorities. This position could do a lot for educating the public on why it is important to take care of our natural resources.

Boulder Tennis Facilities are in moderate-condition, and this palls in comparison to other nearby communities (where courts are not only available, but in vastly better condition). Boulder has a large community of tennis players/enthusiasts (in the thousands!) -- why has this health-generating activity been encouraged in other communities and not Boulder? I'm happy to pay the high taxes here in Boulder, but this is a use for tax monies that would serve many and even make our community more appealing.

Better upkeep of A7 baseball fields. Dogs run unleashed on the dirt fields year around, creating deep footprints in the mud that harden and are a significant risk for kids playing baseball. Additionally, we consistently find dog

Addition of pickleball lines and nets to additional tennis courts. Tennis courts are under-utilized. Frequently empty. When used: usually singles, 2 players per court. Existing pickleball courts are often over-subscribed. Often unavailable. When used: usually doubles, 4 players per court. And 2 pickleball courts per tennis court. Thus, pickleball courts on average serve more than 4 times as many users (accounting player density and frequency of empty tennis courts). Adding pickleball nets and lines entail relatively quick, simple and low-cost opportunities to leverage and better utilize existing tennis court infrastructure. Potentially, very high benefit/cost ratios.

Many of our parks have been under a great deal of stress given uptick of meth addicted unhoused transients. The last clean up near the library found over 1,000 needles adjacent to the playground along with hundreds of pounds of other trash, human waste etc. Our children can no longer enjoy these spaces and many in the community no longer feel safe in our parks built for all to enjoy.

Anonymous

Same as above.
That dogs and people will overrun the parks

That Parks will not focus on core services and try to be too many things to too many people. That taxes will increase. We pay $1,000 a month in property taxes for a modest 2,500 square foot home in central Boulder on a small lot.

The city enforcement and removal of the homeless camps are lacking. There are increased crime and drug activities going on in the parks. I was once confronted by a homeless person on the Pearl street mall with a knife and a gun. (Felony menacing) Put them in shelters if they will go, if not, drug treatment and work programs.

The city's budget is overstretched, and “the basics” are getting short shifted in favor of sexier political ideas. Parks and rec has been near the bottom of the general fund pecking order and it needs to be higher - perhaps be re-dedicating funding to P&R.

I know tennis court upkeep is expensive.

If we build too many new facilities and neglect our parks and trails.

Homeless are destroying certain parks.

Due to property values being as they are, nature areas come at a premium around here. So, that means these areas are less likely to be preserved and likely to be built upon.

Stretching scarce resources over too many parks

I feel underserved in South Boulder; so with all of the assets around the city I worry it keeps the South Boulder area "behind".

If we try to take on too many new projects, existing spaces and resources could fall into disrepair

I am concerned that without proper care, the parks will fail to preserve vital ecosystems

As noted above, I am definitely concerned about being able to take care of

There are so many people on the paths, in the parks and in the open spaces in Boulder now since when I moved here. I will go for a morning run at 6:00am and see a hundred other people doing the same thing. One of the reasons I love Boulder is how active our community is and we have so many great spaces for these activities, but all these places are being "loved to death." I recently learned that the parks department owns Coot Lake. Coot Lake is one of my favorite places to bring my dog since she can go swimming and is able to be off leash. Since coming there for years, it is extremely sad to see how people treat the area. It seems like people think there are no rules and they can do whatever they want. I have never seen a ranger out there so maybe that is why, but the trails are in terrible shape (they have tripled in size!), the outhouse is disgusting and is always smelly, the bridge looks like it will fall over any minute, there are dog poop bags everywhere and the parking lot has so many ruts. I refuse to sit on any of the wooden benches because they have peeling paint and are wobbly. I can no longer use the shore so my dog and I can swim in the reservoir because of the new fence. There are also tree roots being exposed along the shore and I am afraid I or someone will get hurt. The department needs to figure out how to manage this park with all the people that come. This is definitely a park that is being loved to death and is in desperate need of some TLC.

I hope that the Department can prioritize the North Shore, Coot Lake, and surrounding Natural Areas as Parks and Recreation properties in desperate need of repair, maintenance, and focus. At this point, it isn't if something bad will happen at one of these properties, but when. For example, when is the Coot Lake bridge going to finally fall over as someone is walking on it? When is someone going to get hit by a car on 63rd Street because we don't have a proper crosswalk? When will someone's safety be jeopardized because we do not have a ranger? When will the shoreline erode so much that the cottonwoods will die, and the shoreline becomes dangerous to access? When will our bird species of concern no longer return to nest because we have not properly managed and protected their habitat? Below summarizes some of my concerns:

- Enforcement: Besides the infrastructure/maintenance concerns listed below, the department must hire a ranger for the Coot Lake and Boulder Reservoir properties. We are doing our citizens a disservice by not ensuring their safety and protecting our assets and natural resources. It is a "free-for-all" at Coot Lake because people have become accustomed to no enforcement at this property.
- Trail widening: in some places the 8-foot trails are now over 20+ feet wide destroying the native vegetation.
- Erosion: there is major erosion occurring into the ditch on the north side of Coot Lake that soon the Coot Lake trail will be in jeopardy. Also, the north shoreline of the Boulder Reservoir has exposed tree roots and is eroding due to no infrastructure in place to handle people accessing the shore.
- Coot Lake bridge: The wooden bridge is slanted and falling apart. It needs to be replaced before someone gets hurt.
- Coot Lake bathroom: The Tom Watson restroom has been out of commission for over a year due to an electrical problem. Therefore, the Coot Lake outhouse has experienced higher levels of use. The bathroom has not seen repairs (except painting and screen replacements) since it was built. The department must fix both restrooms. - Social trails: Although our team has closed numerous social trails at Coot Lake and the North Shore, there are numerous trails that people still use. We need to create access points to the shore, name/designate trails as official trails, etc. - Picnic tables and benches: The wooden benches and picnic tables need replacement or major repairs. We tried to fix the picnic table in the NW corner of Coot Lake this year but there are still loose boards and wasp nests (it needs replacement). - Signs: Our trailhead sign board at the 55th trailhead has not been updated in over 15 years. The map we have currently has a date of 2005. To be consistent with other Parks and Recreation signs and provide proper signage for visitors, we need to update this sign board. In addition, our interpretive signs are cracked and faded. We even had one sign that someone vandalized this year with graffiti. - Natural resource protection: As the Natural Lands team, our main goal is to protect the vegetation, wildlife, and natural resources found on Parks and Recreation property. The properties surrounding the Boulder Reservoir provide habitat for a variety of species including bird and amphibian species of concern. We must protect these areas to ensure the long-term success of these vulnerable species.

I think my concerns are reflected in my responses above. Simply put, the City of Boulder, in pursuing all its other issues and initiatives, seems to have dropped the ball on public parks and facilities funding. Well-funded and well maintained public parks and recreation facilities, be they soccer fields, tennis courts, playgrounds, etc., are as critical to the mental and spiritual health of a city as public education, a thriving business community, libraries, museums, art projects, mountain open space, or bike paths. Please address the needs in public parks and facilities.

Things sometimes get a makeover rather than doing it right. For example, repainting a tennis court while the sub surface is crap, that’s a waste of money and doesn’t appease anybody. Post tension concrete however, lasts longer and is ultimately cheaper in the end, regarding maintenance.

Anonymous 2/20/2021 01:15 PM

There is so little upkeep on the tennis courts. And there are so many tennis players in Boulder. There are waiting lists at all the clubs and yet we don’t keep up the outdoor facilities we already have very well.

Anonymous 2/20/2021 08:48 PM

I am very concerned that tennis court facilities have not been maintained to the point where they are potentially dangerous due to major cracks in the surface, and certainly affect the bounce of the ball (a consistent ball bounce is an integral part of the game). Deterioration of nets adversely affects the game. I am concerned that poor workmanship with past patching and resurfacing has allowed for water seepage and continued cracking and bubbling of court surfaces.

Anonymous 2/20/2021 10:21 PM

Improve the current public tennis courts and create an indoor public tennis facility that is not controlled by the city tennis coach Gonzo but open to the public equitably all ages included. And now with Pickleball there are less tennis courts available at times.

That we start allow development of our open space.
Adding activities that should not be in the parks - too much late night entertainment, too much alcohol (or any at all), changing the nature of our special environments in our parks.

Concerned that there won't be funds set aside for keeping this great resource, the only public Platform Tennis courts in Boulder County, maintained.

Same land/facilities and more people or worse, less land/fewer facilities and more people.

Corners have been cut on others (Chautauqua). I'm concerned we may continue to cut corners.

Parks and facilities are overcrowded already and population in the area will only increase.

It is better to have well run, well maintained facilities and parks than have too many that are not taken care of properly.

We don't seem to prioritize upgrading existing parks and facilities- although the reservoir has yet to open and that was badly needed.

Both platform tennis & pickleball are growing concerns, I'd like to see more of them, improvements to existing facilities, & attention paid to make sure they are safe to play on.

I worry our paddle courts will deteriorate with proper attention.

Maintenance/refurbishment of tennis courts.

I have concerns that with a lack of a ranger presence around the reservoir that illegal activities will continue to jeopardize the landscape and the quality of the water in the reservoir.

Underinvestment pushing the public to support private recreational facilities leading to a downward spiral of funding for the public facilities...

Boulder Tennis Facilities are in moderate-condition., and this palls in comparison to other nearby communities (where courts are not only available, but in vastly better condition). Boulder has a large community of tennis players/enthusiasts (in the thousands!) -- why has this health-generating activity been encouraged in other communities and not Boulder? I'm happy to

I'm concerned that our parks and bike path areas are becoming less safe. I don't want to let my 10 year old ride his bike alone to school because sometimes there are homeless people sleeping under one of the bridges he has to cross over. I'm concerned when my teenage daughter wants to tube in the creek because there are so many discarded needles and human waste in our creeks. This trend is unacceptable and I fear will be the demise of our beautiful city.

Anonymous 2/26/2021 03:45 AM
Iris Fields, they are a great community resource, with a rich history, but are owned by the County. The County is not well set up to handle a sports property, they do not care about it, and have been a bad partner to the organizations who use it for baseball, softball, soccer and football. The County is happy to throw it weight around and threaten to sell the land. It is time for the city to deal with this issue, the land is in the city and city has the staff to properly managed it. There are strong local volunteer organizations who have put thousands of hours and dollars into Iris Fields, and would like a better partner like the city parks and rec.

Anonymous 2/26/2021 05:04 AM
Increasing asset prices, a potential lack of funding, and Boulder's need for additional housing may create pressure for Boulder Parks and Recreation to sell off certain assets so additional housing may be built. Without the parks maintained by Boulder, the city becomes a less desirable place to live.

Anonymous 2/26/2021 06:23 AM
My concern is that the city seems not to care about families and children. We have awesome walking trails, biking ways, etc. We have lousy kids sports facilities.

Anonymous 2/26/2021 09:30 AM
See 6.
If we don't take care of what we have, then there will be a diminishing use and support of parks and facilities that bring equal access to the public.

I want to preserve baseball fields. There is a thriving South Boulder Little League community. Baseball needs well maintained fields and solid, predictable access.

Just not to let the facilities we have become delapidated or become obsolete.

As above, concerns about the growing homelessness camps and the associated trash/needles/etc.

Boulder will toss out the 'old' and jump to something 'new' on a whim.

Homeless encampments along public walkways

That the leash rules on the baseball fields aren't enforced and the problem becomes worse.

Compared with surrounding communities, our tennis facilities are an embarrassment. There have not been new ones built in over 20 years.

I'm concerned that a child is going to get seriously hurt on one of the sports field due to lack of maintenance. Maintenance and updates have been lacking, particularly for non-premier sports facilities. Yes, Pleasant View is immaculate and Stazio is very good, but those are used on a limited basis due to cost and the gates are locked. You can't just show up at PV and kick the ball around with your kids. Satellite fields, particularly baseball diamonds at A7/MartinPark/Eisenhower/NorthBoulderPark are not maintained to the level necessary for those activities. A baseball diamond required nearly daily dragging along with special attention after rain/snow events. Dogs and humans on the infield when muddy lead to footprints that can harden quickly and make play unsafe, i.e. baseball takes a bad hop and hits a kid in the face.

That the parts will fall into disrepair - I have no reason to believe that this will happen, and hope that the city will continue to fund parks as a public good and not rely on increased user/rental fees.

Families are looking for areas for their kids to play baseball, and they judge based on quality of facilities. Boulder has the tremendous opportunity to be a hub of baseball activity during the spring and summer for team practices, league play, and regional tournaments. The higher quality the teams that make Boulder a destination, the more the city benefits in profile and revenue.

Can't do anything else well unless you take good care of the money that you
It is the base from which all other efforts will be advanced.

Boulder is expensive enough budgetary constraints

City general fund tax revenues cannot support parks and recreation services in difficult financial times.

Everyone has to work within a budget. The greatest ideas in the world are only realized with funding.

It's not important. Taxes are too high in boulder and they need to be reduced.

Growth along the front range is not matched by growth in the Boulder tax base. The City of Boulder and Boulder County are providing recreational opportunities for other counties without being reimbursed for the costs of maintenance or the burden imposed on local residents.

We need to be smart about how we spend our money. As we recover from this pandemic, and perhaps prepare for others, we need to make sure we have the financial resources to care for the assets we currently have. New facilities and spaces would be wonderful, but we need to be careful not to overextend with such an uncertain financial future.

One will not be able to continue existence without financial sustainability

Responsibility of all of us, whether in our private, corporate or public lives.

Financial sustainability must be kept in mind so that we can maintain the resources provided to the community.

Because this ties into all of it. Without responsible budget management we can't have nice things, take care of things, have any programs, or do any long term planning.

Anonymous
2/10/2021 09:25 AM

Everything needs funding for maintenance...
Our eyes are always bigger than our stomach and while I applaud our sometimes lofty aspirations here in Boulder, without the ability to find financial sustainability we won't meet any of our goals.

Only when spending wisely and sustainably will help build public trust in local government's financial and management competence.

I think most folks agree that budgets should be balanced, debts paid prior to seeking massive investments in new projects, and the future accounted for as much as possible (both with savings and contingency). Our world changes rapidly and the most costly of any investment is in the manpower it takes to get work done. I don't think that should be skimped on because people are important.

If it's not sustainable it will not endure, it will degrade.

Without a secure financial foundation, nothing else matters.

Our work is accomplished through funding and without it we cannot take care of what we have.

Future budgets post-covid are uncertain and it is important for all city departments to focus on financial sustainability.

The City manages millions of dollars and should do it well. Part of managing money is to do it Sustainably. I think the City needs to take a hard look at how they manage internally.

because money is now limited, budget is tight

So we can keep trails and old buildings maintained. Empty garbage & dog poop. Continue to offer concerts in the Chautauqua. Have clean pools & tennis courts for citizens to use.

Any proper planning to be financially stable. It would be silly to take on more than we can offer. Existing residents should not pay a penalty for an over expansion.

Pretty simple - I try to be financially frugal and I'd like to see our taxes stay the same.

All other goals are not feasible without first being financially stable.
Ensuring the various parks have enough money for capital improvements and operating cash for routine mx

Because if it's financially sustainable then the impact in Boulderite’s pockets is smaller

We need to end the tax, it just seems to go on and on and on and on and on......

Managing our park system to need less ‘maintenance' ultimately saves money and rewards with the beauty of our natural environment.

to be good stewards of our community. Maintaining a balanced budget and keeping costs down while offering exceptional service is challenging.

if not financially sustainable, everything will definitely run down.

Although Boulder residents are wealthy and have funded open space, nothing lasts forever. Residents have trusted Boulder to manage funds well.

City should provide more funding to this to promote a healthier community. Rates are higher than other communities and the facilities and sub-par.

Financial sustainability is important because we're already falling far behind on necessary maintenance and repairs to our facilities. $16M in backlog maintenance is unacceptable and clearly shows when you visit parks throughout our system. This past year has only exacerbated this situation, with even less money and resources going to the general maintenance and repairs of our parks, even though park usage has dramatically increased. The longer these go undone, the more these issues compound themselves into even larger problems while also incurring greater costs.

Keep raising taxes to buy more open space

City of Boulder is adept at whining...we have no money...therefore we must grow...get smarter with what we have!!

Without financial sustainability, not possible to maintain.

Improvements can't happen without being Financial sound.
I am not a financial guru. But if "sustainability" is meant to suggest that everything Parks and Rec provides should fund itself, this is a wrong-headed idea. Community members pay taxes precisely so that they can pursue pasttimes that are not necessarily profit-making ventures. It is Parks and Rec's responsibility to make sure that parents can take their children to the neighborhood park and find safe playground equipment and clean restroom facilities there without having to worry about whether it's cost effective. Ditto for tennis courts, soccer fields, etc.

Continued fiscally constrained budget environment for the RAF. Important to look on the long-term fund health, while balancing immediate needs.

Nothing works unless it is financially sustainable. New programing (unless it is a trial run and might be replacing another program) should not be started without an appropriate revenue stream.

It is important for keeping the existing structures in good condition.

Without solid financial practices our department cannot function. This also ensures that we set aside monies to take care of the things we have and do not take on too many resources without the ability to sustain them.

It is important to not take on new debt or raise taxes. Live within your means.

Attending to increasing and competing demands means being fiscally smart. Our recreation centers are a treasure.

It's a requirement

The pandemic made it clear that BPR is especially susceptible to economic downturns, and it was really painful to see so many staff furloughed because of our reliance on sales tax revenue. So many of our services, projects, and facilities have been impacted this year because of it.

So you won't cease to exist or take proper care of our assets.

Let's not tax the average Boulder resident more than Boulder does. Boulder needs to always look at financial sustainability.

Duh!

I feel like as a tax payer we pay a high sales tax to parks and open space

A well maintained park system with convenient access to Boulder citizens.
meeting needs of the majority of tax payers

That we will utilize ongoing funding, and grant sources in a responsible manner.

Sustained success and connectivity of Boulder Parks & Paths through the adequate financial planning and assessment of cash and cash reserves.

More of a steady-state equilibrium rather than a continuing upward trend. Yes, costs rise due to inflation, and more people means higher maintenance needs. But really, my hopes for the future are in the title of this question: financial sustainability.

Assure we have financial stability by not spending money on things that don’t have a tangible result.

That your programs will be financial sustainable.

More creative ways to generate funds, such as charging non-city users extra, setting up a fund/foundation where the public can donate to support their favorite programs (unless the Boulder Community Foundation already allows for that).

Parks and Rec are viable and I don't have to pay any higher entrance fees.

That no more jobs will be lost and that long empty positions or new needed positions will be funded

Rebound from COVID and be able to get to a place financially to offer a wide range of programs and services to the community to help maintain health and wellness at a affordable price

I hope we keep out crony capitalism even at the local level - Boulder city and Parks and Rec level. Don't give-in to the "local" developer sweet heart deals and keeping everything transparent at the Parks-Rec and City planning level.

This one isn't as glamorous or flashy, but that with circumspect planning, the department can minimize layoffs and service reductions in the face of future shocks. Flush years could be used to further stabilize funds and resources.

Continued maintenance and capital improvement of aging city facilities and parks.

business models will be monitored so that financial sustainability is a priority Making sure there are programs that will bring in paying customers. Recruiting instructors that draw crowds, once allowed.

Improving what we have.

that we value the parks and recs enough to adequately fund it

My hope is that programs and facilities can grow and offer more Spending where is most needed and urgent and making the policy and spending as transparent as possible and open to changes and response to feedbacks as efficiently as possible.

I hope the community sees the value and benefit compared to the costs of various programs. I also wish there was a way for folks that work in Boulder but live in the County adjacent (for instance, weird properties in Gunbarrel that for some reason are County despite being surrounded by City) were able to utilize some of these benefits as we do pay for them as we’re so much a part of the City and just unfortunately for some reason renting outside-within it.

That we be prepared for bad times.

That future budgets are built to take care of assets along with sufficient staffing levels

That creative funding outlets are used.

That we are always in a position to weather pandemics and other natural disasters.

that art studios, music venues, parks and rec facilities/programs are permanently cancelled, closed

That we charge non-residents to help with maintenance & continue to do fund raisers through the arts.

Keep the governmental park and rec offered while rehabbing dilapidated Q10 "Financial Sustainability": What concerns do you have for the future?

Anonymous
2/02/2021 07:55 AM

Financial stability is critical and dedicating enough resources to maintain our parks is critical.
That the funding for parks will drop off.

Covid has hit the City hard due to reduction in salestax revenue.

 budgets are tight

If we find ourselves in another season where the Federal administration delays/denies FEMA expenditures (potentially for 8 yrs), that Boulder can handle it's on costs at least without layoffs

Not enough money being directed to parks/rec and facilities will downgrade even more.

Even with a highly sustainable system in place, as in #3 above, multiple challenging time periods in which the system is repeatedly compromised may certainly occur, and require such frequent or large adjustments of the larger City of Boulder system as to throw the PR Department system (or really, any of the City Departments) far out of balance in a way that is difficult/impossible to recover.

Costs become exorbitant, projects do not get finished without increasing funds.

My concern is that loud voices in our community will insist on continuing services that we can no longer afford.

Visitors loving it all to death.

The programs the city tries to implement are not sustainable. The city of Boulder has too many programs that are underfunded. So get rid of affordable housing, transportation planning, and many social services programs. Then properly fund infrastructure and the police so they are the best in the nation.

I am concerned that the pandemic has created a financial future that will be quite different moving forward. We cannot continue to raise taxes to fund new and expanded programs without demonstrating we can take care of properties and facilities to which we are already obligated.

Certain programs and things being cut

Losing the good to endorse some stupid idea (like Boulder running their own energy company. Thank the Lord that has ended.)

Better operations management at all facilities. reduce water and utility consumption so we can keep the Rec centers as a affordable option for longtime residents not just for the new, young, and Techy residents.

Reliance on recreation revenue and sales tax (particularly the former) - Rec as a “volume based business” shows its weakness in times like these. How can we insulate from year-to-year shocks and funding changes?

Being able to survive future pandemics and natural disasters.

that RAF funding will become a bigger and bigger “crutch” to keep facilities operating

That present managers will try to go virtual for programs. Virtual can be ceased for free. This will not generate income for programs

Budget Cuts.

there's never enough money so choices have to made

Boulder becoming too expensive to support a healthy diverse community

COVID impacts on small businesses/venues

Rising taxes and regulations without actually helping the local community and businesses in a positive way.

Costs continue to rise. I'm concerned we don't have long term maintenance cost, manpower cost increases, and a general contingency accounted for.

Bad things happen, be prepared.

Spending money on inessential and fluff programs will detract from the core purpose and mission.

A deepening economic crisis that will cause to not be able to take care of what we have Improvements fail to meet expectations.

As much as I support the City Council's efforts on municipalization, providing shelters for the homeless, dealing with commuting issues, etc., I fear that if they continue this macro focus without realizing that there are some smaller, simpler issues (parks funding, street repair, and the like) that cannot be postponed or ignored any longer, then the quality of life will continue to deteriorate in the city and surrounding area.

Focusing on the financial aid program and "missing middle" access to programs and facilities.

I am concerned by the amount of subsidy our department uses as a whole, as I feel that makes us less resilient and more vulnerable, as has been shown by the pandemic.

Concerns are out of control spending and raised taxes.

Not sure.

Thank you

We continue relying on insecure funding methods and have to see this happen again.

Boulder will continue to go down a 'waste the taxpayer's money' path. Remember we do not all work for Google.

I don't want higher taxes, just lower total spending on unnecessary stuff.

That we have became a huge bureaucratic system that feed on itself and doesn't demand performance from it's employees because theirs little accountability to the public.

TI worry that long range planning will not be adequate to care for our facilities.

The only way to build community is through relationships. This town is very economically split. Perhaps a way to bridge the gap is by trying to build more community relationships.

Rec centers are a shared space that bring people together. The weight rooms are nice I suppose, but I can lift anywhere. I come back time and again because I like the people I engage with.

People meeting other people in places for everyone with low barriers to access are most important to create a great city.

We invest energy and time in what we feel a connection to. It's important to form relationships within our community that solidify and deepen friendships over the years. If we are fond of our community and those within it, it shows. When we are passionate about something we invest time, energy, and our hearts. It's a reflection on the community itself.

We are all in it together. Not just certain groups or people

When we know our neighbors we take care of our neighbors.

Building strong community relationships helps us build resiliency for natural disasters.

When Parks and Rec spun off the Pottery Lab, it demonstrated that the department was uninterested supporting the cultural life of Boulder’s citizens. But Boulder is a community. As we come out of this terrible pandemic, now is particularly important a time to rebuild the community. Now is a particularly important time to focus on supporting existing programs even if they are not directly managed by the city.

It's important that the community is cohesive for all residents of Boulder

The Expand program fostered relationships between participants and neurotypical teammates.

We are a community, everyone likes it when they know the people they live near

More people using the facilities means more people to support them.
There are many programs that will fall by the wayside if the City doesn't support them which hurts Boulder as a whole. I have been here 31 years and would love to see even more partnerships with the city.

Parks and rec help build community. Our vibrant public spaces and recreation opportunities provide places for people of all backgrounds to meet and interact.

A community that has fun together and supports each other is a beautiful experience. Activities like story time in the open space, community concerts, dance performances make boulder feel special.

People are important. People are what build community and organizations that support that community. Organizations that are passionate about what we have here in Boulder often contribute to that sense of belonging and inclusivity - they also raise awareness about City programs and benefits and being deeply embedded in the system, can help others navigate it to pursue their own dreams.

It's critical to long term happiness. Creating a sense of community helps to engage people in their neighborhoods and support local causes and businesses.

We need to appreciate what we have now and learn from one another about the value in being different and celebrating differences. We all need to come together to support one another and the things that make us and our home special.

Boulder is becoming increasingly unaffordable as tech companies move in and prices sky rocket. The white upper class is driving out culture, accessibility and diverse offerings.

As a critical part of the community life of Boulder, P&R assets should be welcoming and supportive of all our diverse populations.

Because this is an investment into the mental health and wellbeing of community members. Education centers like the Pottery Lab, bring community members together so we can learn from each other, build relationships, and grow with each other! More options like this that are accessible to all peoples (not depended on $$) will help our community bond strengthen!

Boulder has some wonderful parks and recreation facilities. Community outreach and thoughtful development of programs which may be more inclusive, including economic considerations, is important to encourage the use and availability of these resources to all members of our community.

Especially as we move forward out of the pandemic and specifically because our community is increasingly made up of families who have moved here from elsewhere, do not have roots in Boulder County, I believe it is important to focus on the glue of what builds a community, investing in relationships through environmental education and the community arts.

Boulder already has extreme class divides that can be felt just about anywhere in town. It is evident that this divide can create a toxic culture and a culture of the have’s and have nots. It is more important than ever, because of increased separation and isolation, that there are opportunities for young and old to be able to safely meet each other and play and laugh together. While Boulder has many opportunities for outdoor recreation and club sports, offering more community gathering spaces such as roller rinks would be welcoming to a more diverse group of individuals.

<td>Boulder is so white! Why? I believe we need to look at this in order to have a more diverse community that is more welcoming and more affordable. Also, something needs to be done about the part of the homeless population that scare many people, say and do nasty things, steal, and litter. There’s such a divided mind in boulder on this topic. As far as I see it- there’s homeless people who are scary and seem entitled and then there’s homeless people who have mental illness, addiction, and whatever else going on that prevents them from being able to secure stable work and housing well are homeless. For instance, I know there’s homeless women who don’t feel safe to stay in the shelters. There’s also non-homeless people who don’t feel safe walking down certain streets. This is an issue in many places, but it seems to be getting worse in boulder. I don’t have any solutions, but I know that “building community relationships” sounds like it’s on the right track.</td>

The pickleball-Covid intersection is a good case in point: A lot of the people we used to play with at the gyms simply stopped coming because there was no organization of drop-in times at the outside courts like there had been with the gyms. Continue with equity and inclusive programming

Keep it up! Great progress so far

That we are able to gather again.

Hearing what folks want, need, and working with the community who come from a variety of financial situations.

Services like Studio Arts can help to bring people together again Outreach and clever summer programs and after school for physical and arts activities for kids who would not have access to private sports and arts.

Actually helping and building programs and things to help support and attract DIVERSE culture in this town. My wife and I bought black baby dolls for our kids when they were 2 because the classes were all white and not a single kid with different color skin and we wanted to make it known that there is all sorts of people in this world and not just people that look like them.

I hope the city of Boulder and Parks and Rec will continue a relationship with Studio Arts Boulder.

Even more great community events and programs. BPOS does a fantastic job of this and creates such a feeling of community.

fuller outreach in a productive manner.

more outreach services to schools and daycares,

Events, programs, and opportunities. And for the underprivileged families to have equal access to the red centers, program, and events that they may not be able to afford

I envision a community that is radically inclusive. This means that we work together to insure that all are included in the conversation and that we resolve any gaps that exist now or in the future to resolve inequities. And that we build in programs that keep the conversation ongoing so that we are not blind-sighted by changes as they come.
Community gatherings and connections

To understand and appreciate what we all have to offer

I envision a roller rink where young and old can gather and laugh together. Roller rinks are often the only community center in US small towns, where birthday parties are held, youth gather on weekends, older citizens can still exercise or watch their grandkids, where roller derby teams provide exercise and camaraderie among skaters who wouldn’t otherwise consider themselves as athletes, and where community can gather and cheer on local speed skaters and derby teams. An economically and age accessible indoor activity.

I hope we can be a kinder, friendlier community

Deeper community.

We hope you continue to support local businesses as partners. It seems to be so positive for everyone.

That communities are created via the parks we have.

See 3

Better relationships with all of our community members

Greater emphasis on community building in public spaces through events.

More partnerships for programs like the Walk with a Doc.

Community programming that draws in all types of people to enjoy company and culture together.

I hope that you will continue to reach out to communities like mine -- the Orchard Grove Mobile Home Park -- to help marginalized citizens become more involved with P and R resources.

That it is just a lot of lip service and going through the motions throughout the community. That people don't really want to build community, they just want to ensure their own self-interest.

Regarding pickleball, the number of players seems to be far greater than the number of available courts and it isn't even nice weather yet! I like the idea of supporting Boulder parks and rec, but lately I've been going to other places to avoid having to wait around and/or not play at all. I met my wife playing pickleball at your rec centers! I don't expect every stranger that meets on your courts will get married, but I do believe it is a testament to how powerful the concept of a communal playing space can be.

Health means more than just body - it must continue to include mental health. Even more community outreach - more neighborhood help/education at small group level.

That it takes great effort to meet people beyond "your" circle. Many young adults are losing interpersonal and social skills. I work in the medical field and see this. Bedside manner is slowly becoming a lost art. Having more opportunities to interact in person (post-Covid epidemic) can have a great impact on us - emotionally, psychologically, can promote confidence, etc.

That we don't move forward. You can't just keep them up. We need to move on with what we have first and make it work

That we will continue to cater to a single class of people.

I am concerned that Boulder is going to continue to trend whiter because of the high cost of housing and the outdoor spaces will be inaccessible and inhospitable to people who are not rich.

Boulder seems more and more focused on supporting corporate and buisness "communities" at the expense of arts and recreation. We can't lose sight of why people came to Boulder in the first place, and we need to strengthen what we have first.

That parks and rec won't recognize this critical need for fostering relationships between neurodiverse and neurotypical participants.

On the other hand, events like the Iron Man, which bring in many people from out of town (but very few locals) have the opposite effect and turn people off from parks and rec. There is a big difference between a public and a private event. Events that bring out the Boulder public are worth pursuing.

Building community relationships has become extremely difficult in the times of COVID-19. Gathering is restricted and online gatherings are difficult to identify, find and attend if folks aren't on social media. I think people want to engage and shares their views and values but are concerned about how to do so safely. People feel isolated - which does not bode well for developing relationships. Some people have been aggressive towards others in public spaces (about masks, about the rules and regulations, taking up space and not sharing it or recognizing that others may want a turn). This will be a huge hurdle to overcome as it is really about changing hearts and minds and social norms.

I'm concerned that Boulder's population of extremely wealthy people force out any diversity that may contribute to a thriving and unique community.

Anonymous

As more people come from areas that don’t have such special things and places to protect, they don’t understand or appreciate how to foster the environment and opportunities we have in Boulder. Kids are also more and more glued to the indoors and their tech and we need to be teaching them about the world around them, far and near.

financial & accessibility for all members of our community. I would hope that some time could be found to consciously review & create (if needed) programs which could serve all persons who live in Boulder, regardless of age, economic ability, cultural background, etc. I am most concerned about seniors and low income families and other persons, being left out either by: lack of resources; by thinking parks & recreation is not for people like them; by not being aware of resources & programs available; by needing a helping hand to take advantage of parks & recreation (financial, transportation, connection). These are some of my concerns.

My concern is that the town is full of very wealthy disconnected white elites, that there is not room for a diverse middle class in Boulder. At the same time, there is an invisible underprivileged group of individuals and families overlooked because the rich people all think they live in a bubble and have found paradise and therefore do not see problems directly in front of them. If I hear bubble once more I'll puke. Saying we live in a bubble is a way for people to not have to talk about the actual very realy problems that exist within our community. It's a lazy sweep in conversation. I'm really tired of it. :)

As a middle class, white woman, if I feel like I don't belong in the "Boulder" culture I can not imagine how other populations feel in this community. We need to have a diverse representation in our community’s leadership, event planning, and councils.

My concern is that people of color will continue to be dismissed and shoved aside in the wake of white entitlement in the city of Boulder.
Again, we believe that financial help, we can create a vibrant art community in Boulder which is needed.

Conversations and relationships about and with the land are challenging. My concern is a balance with land use, enjoyment and the importance of the natural world that is more than something for human use.

The Pottery Lab building is well suited to use as a pottery making facility. The building is historic and will need continuing care provided through public funding. The staff and clients provide needed day to day care and attention to safety.

If we don't address financial inequalities, Boulder will continue to become richer and whiter.

That the importance of existing And working neighbourhoods will not be considered in city planning.

Deterioration of our parks systems due to poor management or lack of funding

Budget. If community relationships deteriorate than so will our facilities and resources.

We will be ruled by a scarcity mentality

That expanded community relationships will be seen as frivolous.

I'm worried that the efforts may not extend to the odd little outlying-but-still-in-the-city areas, such as the islands of city structure in the Gunbarrel area

I don't have any -- I trust the process.

Having all community members heard

People will continue to be isolated even after the pandemic

That we grab the opportunity to be an inclusive community.

Q14 "Youth Engagement and Activity": Why is this important?

We've all been impacted by COVD, but I feel youth and already marginalized youth pre-COVID are at greater risk. Getting youth connected to nature, experiential learning opportunities, and closing the educational gaps are important equity issue.

Youth these days are even more stressed than ever. Suicides/attempts up and school shootings need to be prevented. Kids need an outlet that is not over the internet.

Anonymous
2/03/2021 04:06 PM

More teen centers. Places for kids to hang out in a safe environment. A place to play internet games and other games like pool and chess and maybe a Friday night game night.
because investing in our children is investing in our future ~ let's make it a good one :)

kids spend more time than ever in front of computer screens

Youth are the future.

Roller derby serves youth and the LGBTQ community. It is SO important that the city help leverage this opportunity for kids. This sport has been life saving for some youth who struggle with identity and self confidence issues.

I have young children and want them to have access to resources that will help them develop

They are our future and need healthy guidance and experiences.

I've lived/grew up in Boulder. When I was in high school, we wanted to hang out with friends, but not at each other's houses. I feel like it's important to have a place where teens are welcome to have fun with friends outside of their homes, but later at night. In 2013-2014 there was nowhere to hang out, especially when you wanted to do fun things at night like dance, or just have a space to hang and be teens. I feel like if there was a safe space for teens to be teens at night, they might not be as tempted to turn to drugs or parties for fun. There was some sort of dance place on 29th street for a while, but I believed it closed.

Need trails that are close for my children.

Youth have become isolated and are losing human connection (in-person).
Recreation opportunities need to be offered for all ages and economic levels for the youth in Boulder. Learning a sport or an artistic skill is vital for many youth.

Youth deserve good recreation programs and facilities so these healthy practices become part of their lifestyle.

Getting kids interested in nature helps build lifelong protectors of it.

Youth are future stewards of the land. By engaging youth we can foster a life long appreciation for nature, parks, and open space. The youth of today are voters of tomorrow; and will play a vital role in future management plans.

Healthy, active, engaged youth lead to healthy active and engaged adults
We must expose are young ones to the idea of conservation.

Kids are the future, I have no original thoughts on this topic (obviously)

It's important for youth to feel that they have a place at the table. They are the future and many are great visionaries. We can learn from them. If they are engaged and respected, they will want to take part in the larger community.

Our youth need parks and places to play outside, especially with all the condos etc that don't have large spaces to play and hike and get exercise.

Pull kids from screens/devices, duh! Smart kids can do wonders, but if they're not healthy they tend to have shorter lives and their benefits to society are similarly limited. So offer things that they enjoy (without violating the "financial sustainability" or "taking care of what we have" priorities) so they are self-motivated toward healthy activity.

The youth are our future. I feel we have an obligation to pass on what we have and facilitate exposure to nature as much as possible.

For many of the same reasons as "community health and wellness, but directed specifically at young people and their parents: improve quality of life, decrease healthcare costs, attract and retain residents. Since youth are our future, we contribute to a healthy future when we instill values for healthfulness in young people.

Our role as adults is to pass on the values of the open space to our youth.

It's the crux of so many things. We need interesting activities and places for middle school through young high school to go and enjoy themselves recreationally. You have knocked it out of the park with elementary and younger - my kids LOVED everything about the City's programs. It's time to expand programming for the demographic who need it most. City camp counselor spots shouldn't be so dang competitive to get a spot - start there - expand summer opportunities for kids in middle and high school!

With the further gentrification of Boulder, I worry that it will become a hostile place for young people to live so I would like there to be programs for kids.

Communities that take care of their kids are strong communities.
Youth seem to be less active than ever these days. Without building a foundation of physical and mental health at an early age, it may be lost permanently.

They are the future

There participation will add to my exercise classes and pickleball games.

Kids who start active, stay active

Youth are the future of community, environmental and planetary relationships. They learn from what their "elders" teach and provide as models of behavior - they learn "right" relationship with peoples and other life forms.

Because Boulder's average demographic is much older than neighboring communities and there is a severe lack of public services and facilities that help attract young families and families with kids. The local culture is getting very stagnant and stale due to the aging demographics.

Kids need open space to run and grow and stay healthy.

Kids are important! Supporting kids is also supporting parents.

They are the future and deserve the focus of our investment.

Youth programs, and activities guided towards youth, are so important for Boulder, or any community. Youth engagement benefits not only the youth but entire families of the community. Our parks and youth engagement help keep the children of our community healthy and safe, and creates a culture of community and pride towards the place they live.

Parks, art, and outdoor experiences are so important for shaping youth!

Make our parks welcoming and accessible to all youth sports, education and mental health activities. Are parks are not used enough. Start young people on a life journey where they seek the joy of outdoors.

The youth are more powerful than people give them credit for and establishing good habits early will help them never have to re-learn how to be, and how to recognize and take care of the wonders around them.

<td>Schools, particularly in the COVID environment and with the emphasis of school systems on providing a specific knowledge base and skill set, are not able to spend optimal time or resources on building open ended and tactile experiences that stimulate all parts of children's growing capacity. This is especially important for &quot;at risk&quot; children. The children are the future. Providing them with opportunities and programs to enrich their learning will lead to a better future.

Kids need to explore and upheave opportunities to get off a computer.

Yes, if involved, they will stay involved.

All young people need their lives enriched with studio arts

See above comments.

Promotion of the importance of nature and healthy physical activities.

engage healthy actives at young ages will hopefully be beneficial long term for not just health but for studying and engage citizens in city sponsored events and activities

To give youth from disadvantaged backgrounds a wider perspective

A cliche but true--youth are our future, and the more we can provide them in terms of exposure to nature and to the arts, the more they will learn to protect and nourish these vital resources in the future. Arts experiences such as provided by the Pottery Lab are hard to come by at under-resourced schools, and likewise with experiences in nature, both of which are critical to young people exploring their full range of talents and interests and necessary to help them grow into their best adults.

As I stated earlier, our daughter fund her passion and community through dance.

I have 3 children.

giving youth a sense of purpose. Giving youth a sense of ownership.

Youth are the future of our planet, they need to engage on the importance of the ecological system, and the importance of Parks & Recreation.

Children need great engaging places to play and explore especially when too young to hike or do other outdoor activities. Play structures that are more eco friendly and nurture skills one might desire to use in nature as they grow.
Check out Wash Parks new playground in Denver.

Helping youth develop habits of physical activity and care for the environment is an important investment in the future of our community.

Especially now, youth need a place to let of steam to have healthy ways outdoors to reconnect not only with nature but with each other Youth programs are very full. There is a need.

They’re our future adults of the community

Every person needs to find what makes their heart happy, the parks and rec deposit helped me give my kids experience that I couldn't teach them, that opened doors to them THANK YOU.

Youth are the future of the community.

Our teens need to have safe places to hang out.

Kids need to get outside and off of screens

Lower-income youth are often precluded from organized sports teams due to family commitments and cost. Many of these families have limited opportunities and access to open space and water-based recreation. Boulder Reservoir used to be one asset where an entire family can enjoy the beach.

Valuing our environment is of upper importance to future generations

Kids need fewer screen and more activity

The mental health of our youth has become a front running issue.

Youth needs to have even more outlets with all the “distractions” we have in this world!

The engagement of youth is key to ensure our investments (above) will pay

During the COVID pandemic, we have seen how important exercise and outdoor activities are to the health and wellness of our youth. Boulder Parks and Recreation is a crucial component of the health and wellness program for our kids. Boulder youth sports programs use many Boulder Parks and Recreation facilities to provide Boulder youth with programs that promote mental and physical health. Our youth need a commitment from Boulder Parks and Recreation to continue providing this important outlet.

Children and families have been left behind in Boulder. The nicest baseball fields, Stazio, are reserved solely for adults. I have never seen a child grace those fields, but I've seen a lot of older softball groups. Tom Watson is unsafe, unsheltered, and unpleasant, and should likely be torn down. North Boulder park is barely usable. Iris is a nice complex, but the maintenance is terrible, and the fields would be overgrown if not for volunteer days from NBLL. The Boulder lacrosse teams all share practice facilities on uneven ground at Manhattan middle school. The only nice facilities for kids sports is the Pleasant View complex, which is great, but only for soccer. We have no indoor sports facilities for kids to practice in the winter, instead having teams rent out poorly lit warehouses out of town.

Habits created in youth have long lasting impacts over the life course.
Clearly getting the youth outside will make them value this for the next generation.

Outdoor youth activities and sports are even more important in these pandemic times where kids are on their screens all day. Get those kids outside riding bikes and playing with balls.

I strongly support maintaining and creating a park system that encourages youth sports. Particularly, we need to keep the baseball/softball fields in place.

This city needs better youth fields for the young. Without competitive youth facilities, Boulder will become the satellite to other nearby towns as more people move in.

Boulder is needs a place for the youth of the city and surrounding communities to go to play sports. Baseball in particular has been undervalued in south Boulder.

There are a lot of water sports that could be imitated at the Rez. How about water Volleyball? Courts could be set up in the water! Kids leagues???

Critical for development of youth and future

The Boulder Camera reported just today, Feb 27th, that youth have been disproportionately affected by covid isolation in their rates of depression, and their obesity rate has soared due to inactivity and more time playing on line games since Covid. They need youth sports and interaction and fresh air and fun!

We need to have activities for the youth. Now more than ever

That we can groom more kids with volunteer and paid jobs to green Boulder

Rec centers/pool/parks prioritize access to facilities after school and on school holidays so youth can engage in activities like basketball and swimming. Park facilities are expanded in neighborhoods and near schools to provide opportunities for youth to do things after school and on weekends within walking/cycling distance (for middle schoolers and elementary kids). This expansion could include small community bike/skate parks or other facilities that don’t require ‘Planned or Scheduled Fun’. Outdoor Water facilities are provided in walking/accessible locations for all of Boulder to help cool off in the Summer. All outdoor water facilities and recreation is located in central Boulder except the Res... We need more community availability. In South Boulder, there is a High School (Fairview), a Middle School (Southern Hills) and 3 elementary schools within walking distance of South Boulder Rec Center and Harlow Platts park. That ALL of our youth will have access to opportunities and education
More young people, especially from under-resourced families and schools, will be able to take advantage of programs such as those offered by the Boulder Pottery Lab and the parks/recreation/open space programs.

I hope other children have the same experience in finding community and health wrapped in one package.

My youngest has enjoyed gymnastics and dance. We absolutely love her ballet instructor, Vanessa. We hope programs like these continue.

Hope that youth can have opportunity for a broad range of activities to engage them. Able to find the things that they are truly passionate about.

That through them Parks & Recreation keeps being an important part of every community.

I don't think this has to be so intensive on the program offering side. But just offering safe outdoor play spaces with innovative, eco-friendly play structures

My hope is that youth will have positive associations with exercise and with spending time outdoors.

I would like to see more creative arts programs lead by artists and artisans or even just skilled people who could teach a class.

More opportunities for kids.

I'm not in touch with the youth of boulder because I'm not a parent. I Just know it's important. Especially to keep kids involved and engaged in community which of a huge preventer of addiction, bullying, suicide, dropping out of school, etc.

I may sound like a broken record but I'd like to see Boulder open up facilities more to children's activities rather than focusing on adult sports; the best example I have is the availability of Stazio fields. I hope BPR can continue to encourage established organizations to run youth activities. There is a thriving community of Little League baseball in both North and South Boulder that use BPR fields. FC Boulder and other soccer leagues are other great organizations. Avid's summer camps are great. There are many others. Let these organization provide youth activities. BPR should make rentals affordable, especially for volunteer-based organizations like Little League. I hope that BPR does not try to implement competing programs but instead collaborates with these organizations to provide programming to meet everyone's needs and goals

To have a centrally located high profile outdoor sports complex that multiple middle and high school teams can use for practice, and CABA and USSSA can use for weekend baseball tournaments. Perhaps partner with BVSD or CU to form an alliance to put multiple tournament sized baseball fields on CU South campus, or next a field next to New Vista HS. Or better utilize outdoor space at East Boulder Community Park for this purpose.

The tradition of a small, older, vocal minority driving management plans and limiting activities and access to trails and facilities because they do not want share open space lands or parks with their neighbors. More limitations and restricted activities can limited youth engagement activity.

Our concerns for land management isn't common with young citizens.

While the opportunities provided by online curriculum and teaching are important they do not replace hands-on instruction and exploratory activity. Most complex problems are multivariable and don't have a simple linear solution. Experiences in working in the arts areas and in outdoor education provide K-12 opportunities for youth to explore, try, fail, alter their approach, and try again. That's what deep learning is all about.

Rec centers are dated and not designed well to serve members at all levels. They are more geared towards adults rather than kids.

Anonymous
2/21/2021 07:23 AM
If kids find healthy activities that they enjoy doing they have less chance to get into trouble.
That they don’t.

Parks and Recreation appears to be driven by creating more revenues rather than serving its citizens. The youth community is not served by turning Boulder Reservoir into an event center that serves adult competitions.

Youth lose interest in active pursuits

The City isn’t really offering what they use to. Our family started our activities at the rev center and now attend mostly private programs. Our oldest started in your dance program and still dances with Kinesis Dance. This has been her lifeline. Sadly our youngest has had to go to a private gym due to extended facility closures for his activity.

How to get them truly invested.....

Complacency may reduce engagement.

I am concerned that Parks and Rec is beginning to become unduly focused on financial and profit centers at the expense of their core, critical focuses. The Flatirons Golf course already has a purpose and does not need entertainment just to add additional revenue - the Boulder Reservoir already has a health and wellness purpose and does not need and should not have an entertainment component added. This detracts from the community health and wellness of areas such as these.

Areas of value to us ie the Iris Field do not have a secure future, want to see growth not reduction.

I’m concerned that for a town that identifies with sports, wellness and outdoors that we do not have better multi-sport complexes for our kids to use.

I have two baseball players and have been on the board of north boulder Little League. It has been a constant frustration with the city that they prioritize adult softball leagues over the kids, at facilities like Stazio and Mapleton. Every year our youth leagues ask for field time on the properties the city invests in, like the two mentioned, and we rarely ever get anywhere. We understand adult sports are important, but it is frustrating to feel like a local youth sports organization is not given fair access to the better fields. You do not have this issue with soccer, due to the size of Pleasant View, but for baseball we do. Having kids play at the lower quality fields, like Tom Watson, is not community focused. We are all community members, with a volunteer board and coach, and we cater to young. Families. One would hope the city would be more inclusive.

The kids sports facilities in Boulder totally inadequate (except for Pleasant View, which is great for soccer/rugby). We have subpar baseball, lacrosse, etc. fields. Boulder families are getting older as cost of living increases and less younger families can afford to live here. It would be a good to invest in hallmark, all-star facilities to help bring back the younger families. That our societies prioritizing covid restrictions over the mental and physical health of our youth will result in skyrocketing mental health and drug abuse in our younger generation.

Not keeping up with the times and keeping the youth interested

The recent fires show that Boulder is not adequately prepared for a severe fire season.

I don't believe this will be the last pandemic we will see in our lifetimes. And with climate changing, I don't believe we are free from future flood or fire damage. The department NEEDS to be nimble and efficient to be able to deal with these types of events.

Trends change people change the environment changes

We can only expect so much from the organization. We have to give it the tools.

Basically, keeping up to date with current technology has the potential to reduce costs, and keep our parks financially sustainable.

Tech and data is important to customer satisfaction and efficient delivery of services.

Because things are changing.

I mostly picked this one because the rest of your options clearly exhibit a particular political bias and ideology. I think having the right tools, and keeping up with technology to provide better service is very important.
We have sophisticated electronic monitoring tools and other sensors that should be used in the next five-year (or longer) plans.

How we achieve our goals, the processes we use to get there, are just as important, if not more important, than the goals themselves.

Every year brings new challenges and problems to solve and organizations and programs won't survive if they are not in a state of constant evolution.

When we aren't considering the whole community as an organism and the importance of equity and when we don't use data to guide decision making we will inevitably fall into the trap of responding to squeaky wheels or those who complain the loudest. This does not help us achieve our goal of creating a healthy and vibrant community for everyone. And without the data and solid processes to collect that data we can't explain to community members why their particular request might not be at the top of the list of priorities.

Times are changing & just want to make sure we keep up with new innovative ideas/classes for staying healthy & active.

Adapt to the evolving needs and demographics changes and the project population increases take effect.

Thank you

BPR should have up to date technology and infrastructure

More controlled burns, more fire control resources.

In my mind, Organization Readiness doesn't mean growing the size of the department in order to prepare for the future events. I would like to see more stewardship agreements with neighborhoods and school PTOs to maintain local parks and playgrounds. Leveraging these partnerships could provide existing staff the headroom to prepare for future disasters or downturns. I would also like to see more leveraging of external grants and funding for park and facility improvements.
Replacement or fixing up the volleyball nets and courts across the city particularly at east.

That we invest in technology that makes sense and helps us improve.

Better website. Easier registration system.

I would like either more dedicated pickleball courts or at a minimum more pickleball lines on tennis courts. Pickleball is growing very quickly and there is a serious shortage of courts.

the ability of Boulder residents to use reservation systems equally. For example, residents (actually anyone) with annual passes, silver sneakers and credit card accounts are treated differently when reserving a tennis court. Those with annual passes or silver sneakers cannot make reservations online, and must call a rec center front desk to reserve a court, while credit card account holders can reserve anytime online. This is inefficient and causes front desk personnel at rec centers to juggle several things including telephones, computers, check in, etc., which leads to many mistakes and errors.

Improved access to sites.

Much hope. We have the tech available = we have capability. We can deliver services and receive resources ever more fluidity. The more internally we are organized, the greater our ability to respond to outer challenges, changes and requests.

When the time is right, it’s easier to proceed if we are organized...

Moving trails, Virtual experiences to enhance our real hikes and skiing and backpacking and biking and walking and swimming and climbing, etc.

Concerns that there isn’t data to show the growth of pickleball in boulder. Longmont has nearly 10 dedicated pickleball courts and Boulder has zero.
too much growth is overwhelming the facilities and amenities. Something should be done to prioritize Boulder residents’ use of facilities (see #4 above)

Support growing, aging community.

We will be taken by surprise by some unexpected shortfall or calamity, we will lack the financial reserves to follow through or sustain spaces, facilities and programs; we will lack the resilience and responsiveness to deal with change.

Concerned about getting feedback but with too many voices and we are not organized it can overwhelm the arts board. Thank you for asking!

Parking is an issue at almost every Boulder facility

That current and future taxes will only encourage more idiots to build more tacky tacky houses all in a row or on top of each other.

That demands by the increasing population in the area can be accommodated.

That we do not stay active with this and do not perform continued evaluations of our processes which allows for us to fall behind in readiness.

A concern is that Parks and Recreation will not be ready and will react rather then respond, thus working against building community.

Not keeping up with technology will create longer times in process, or maintenance of our Parks. By having the right technology and processes you can do more in less time.

Budget issues and lack of publicly available information for concerned citizens and scientists are foremost in my mind.

Using deliberate and thoughtful processes takes time and can run the risk of becoming inefficient.

Budgets. Ebbs in public attention given to recreational facilities and programs.

This may involve culture changes in how work groups operate and this may be challenging and take time. Thoughtfulness is required when using data in decision making to ensure that it’s helping us achieve equity in decision making and doesn’t have unintended and negative consequences.
Being able to implement some of these changes in a timely matter. It shouldn't take 3-5 years to add a few platform courts to say an area like EBRC or maybe even a better location.

Lack of community outreach and bureaucracy that does not align with the desires or needs of the community. Remember that park & rec are a service for the community - the public shouldn't have to bend to the will of the bureaucracy. We need more partnerships & less conflict...

Using antiquated systems that are so hard to navigate/sign up that people just give up.

Q20 "Equity": Why is this important?

Systemic and historical inequities exist and experienced in our city and we need to work hard to create safe, inclusive, culturally relevant and welcoming spaces in our parks, facilities and programs in a way that is transparent and supportive to ALL community members--of any age.

Because we should all be able to use the resources equally

Some populations in the city have less resources and should not be overlooked. Parks are a great asset for all socioeconomic populations.

Increased access to natural resources could increase investment in the environmental conservation. Beauty and new experiences should be available to all, especially to more accessible trails.

Equity ensures that the system is fair. Achieving fairness in all aspects of community engagement and service provision is yet another complexity within a dynamic and always evolving PR Department like the City of Boulder's. Any analysis of the overall system should have an equity/fairness layer that will not be obscured or overridden by challenges that may occur, although of course there may be elements of an overall equitable approach that ebb and flow over time as the community evolves.

All parts of our community need to have access to programs to remain healthy throughout our lives.

To avoid reinforcing “healthy food and rec deserts” as means of inherent bias/oppression.

This is the lens through which everything needs to be done or else it’s just not good enough. I think our intentions are good here in Boulder and great strides have been made in recent years. I think Boulder does a good job but there could be more cultural experiences brought to the area. Have a “host a country” experience. Say, India is represented one weekend and there are dances and food to be experienced. Show that Boulder is truly interested in inclusion and being the city that brings that experience.

Boulder has a strong, loud, white population. I worry the voices of our non-white community members are often seen as such a small group that they are not taken into account. As a person who works in high-tech, I spend a lot of time with well-paid white people. I want myself and my kids to be around a diverse community when not at work. I want the people supporting the government labs and high-tech companies, who are often lower-paid, to feel welcome and have a place where we interact as equals

2/04/2021 08:23 AM
Because Boulder HAS BIPOC people in this city/county, but you would never know it out on a trail or in recreation. If these spaces are truly for all people, this has to change with intentional outreach BY and FOR the people that are not currently feeling welcome/educated/access to these spaces.
Socio economic equity is vital in Boulder. While city is focused on racial equity and that's certainly important, the bigger issue in Boulder is the gap between wealthy and not. P&R can offer services that others can afford and that can be welcoming in a way that private gyms might not be. (gymnastics team)

Equity is important because some groups need to be more closely recognized for contributing to life and history in the making.

All Boulder residents should have equitable access to trails, parks and facilities.

The point of community is "everyone" be heard. Listening must include getting to know individuals, inviting them personally to participate.

The disconnect between what Boulder SAYS about its commitment to equity and inclusion vs the actual, material effect of the city's policies makes me want to throw up. The city COULD rectify this dissonance by openly saying "Everything in Boulder is first and foremost for wealthy white people, but we will give our cast-offs to the most sympathetic poor, as long as they are appropriately grateful". But I would prefer if the city could instead make structural changes to remove its barriers entirely. Boulder is a city built on unceded land stolen from the Ute, Arapahoe, and Cheyenne people, in violation of the Treaty of Fort Laramie. Colonizers who purchased parcels of this land love to do hollow land acknowledgements and pay lip service to non-discrimination, but when it comes time to provide input on Parks policy, their true nature is revealed - what "I" want for "MY children" & "MY city", they say. They refuse to recognize any of their own contributions to inequity, and reject all changes that would cause them the slightest inconvenience, let alone return any of what they have stolen. Their first priority is that the city parks serve them and their desires, including keeping out people they see as "other". A simpler graphic example - https://www.researchgate.net/profile/Shrehan_Lynch/publication/340777978/figure/fig1/AS:882312354988036@1587371066584/The-difference-between-the-terms-equality-equity-and-liberation-illustrated-C.png - shows the current reality of Boulder. Boulder will only add boxes for anyone if it can add them for the tallest person. As Anand Giridharadas writes in his book Winners Take All, there is not always a "win-win" solution when it comes to rectifying inequity. At some point, there can be no further progress unless those who have taken too much are made to return some of it. As CU researcher Abby Hickcox wrote in her 2017 paper "White environmental subjectivity and the politics of belonging", "Conceptualizations of space, such as open space versus urban space and ideas of what is and is not 'environmental,' are discursive forms that must be examined in the study of racism. Both actual material spaces and the social constructions of those spaces (the imagined spaces) shape social norms and expectations." The social construction, the very IDEA of parks owned and managed by a colonist government, the use of "public" lands as a place of "recreation", requires and carries numerous exclusionary assumptions. Can lands truly be "public" if they are "owned" by the government and thus by the people with the wealth and power to control the government, who then enforce their will & ideas about who and what is or is not tolerated on said land? What about the ways the designation of some land for the purpose of "recreation" denies holy and holistic conceptions of the land held by Indigenous peoples?

I believe unless equity is intentionally addressed across all sectors structural racism, and therefore real barriers, will continue to exist in all parts of our society
It is very important. The United States was founded on equality for the people. If we do not have equitable access to parks and recreation programs, services and facilities, we are not staying true to the founding principles of our fore fathers.

For too long those with more privilege have been the ones responded to and it is time to really listen and engage with the community members who are suffering and underrepresented in our community. Very few wellness organizations are accessible for communities of color in Boulder. We know that communities of color have more statistically poorer health, more children, less money, and this all leads to more health disparity between them and others in our community and as a city we need to address these inequities.

Because municipalities are the closest level of government to local residents and therefore play a critical role in changing systems of oppression.

Everyone should have access to basic life necessities.

I remember one time the City of Boulder asked its employees if they thought there was racism among the staff. Something like 95-97 percent of the employees said no. The person in charge of Human Resources at the time said to the effect that, 'look employees thing we'er doing great.' I remember thinking however that something like 5-7 percent of employees at the time were minorities and I couldn't help but think that they saw racism while the the other 95 percent did not. Equity has to reach everybody.

So long in the coming and can be so complicated to monitor, acknowledge and create. And so important. Really good question.

Because it is incredible to that there are only 3-4 concrete handball courts in Boulder county and they are heavily used by our Hispanic population - so unfair - how expensive is it to build concrete handball courts? We should be encouraging people to do sports

Because the IDD population is underserved and underrepresented in Boulder county

Too often parks development in Boulder is focused on an idea of "showcasing" or providing a "wow" factor versus evaluating what needs a park could or should address

Any divisions are outdated.

Because, we need to have a community that values all people and provides genuine access to resources for all people.

Boulder is very white, I'd like to see a vibrant, diverse, affordable city!

As I mentioned above, we need to include all people, races, religion and intellectual abilities. Everyone needs to feel they are part of the community and not feel isolation.

That the needs of all citizens be considered in planning even if they might not be incorporated in the penultimate plans

Brings in the community as a whole.

It's vital to our community that we focus on equity. For too long our community has ignored this issue.

Because our community members all deserve the opportunity to enjoy ALL that Boulder has to offer! Because some of the community members who need to experience the mental and physical benefits of recreation and the arts are those who have the highest barriers to entry.

That all will be treated fairly

Diversity is what makes the United States of America exceptional. We learn more from different people than we do from the same people and the collective and collaborative outcome is greater than the sum of the parts. Without equity, we are not creating the space for emotional intelligence to flourish and with this, the creative talents to express this beauty.

Similar to thoughts on previous answers...but starting with having programs and communities that nurture and support systematic issues and or equalities so action can be taken and we can improve as a community which will hopefully make a more welcoming place.

Studio Arts Boulder, as an artistic and community organization, should be equally considered with the sports activities it supports.

Boulder is for everyone

Equity is about all people getting what they need. People with I/DD need time with others with I/DD. They need opportunities to recreate under the guidance of people trained in therapeutic recreation.

Every resident has the opportunity to use the Cities amenities and if there are barriers, there should be a way to allow access. Especially with children’s camps/sports.

If we have more equal opportunity to resources (parks/facilities), we are more likely to mix with others people that we would not normally interact with and maybe we can find common ground and interests. You can't build a new relationship if you don't interact with new people.
Obviously, my main focus is on city parks, city recreation centers, and city sports fields and facilities. And since I am a tennis player on public courts, the equity issue I see is that, in ignoring the needs of the tennis playing community for more tennis courts in the midst of the current overcrowding issues, the city is sending the message "If you want to play tennis and get access to a court, then join a private tennis club." And ignoring the fact that tennis is a sport for everyone, the city is making it harder for kids and youth to find an available court to get out and play on. Considering that adult casual tennis players, league tennis players, pickleball players, and both adult and youth tennis training programs have to share a limited number of courts that haven't been added to in decades, the City is closing off tennis opportunities for youth and those people who can't afford to join a private tennis club. It addition, as the majority of our tennis playing public is female (there are traditionally more options available for men when it comes to sports), providing more courts will only enable more female participation in outdoor athletics.

Helping marginalized citizens feel part of the community is important to their feeling of value and to their feeling invested in the larger community.

This is important because Boulder is extremely white and getting less socio-economically diverse by the day. We need to make sure all of our residents feel served by parks and rec.

Leave no one out.

There is a long history of inequity, even in relation to the natural world. It is time to right the wrongs.

Ownership is the key to positive outcomes within the community at large, our parks and streetscapes, specifically

I think it's the duty of our present community and leaders to create a new vision and way moving forward.

Access for all people is important

Boulder is perceived as a rich town and not diverse enough. Building public run facilities for all people regardless of status etc. is the way to do this.

It is important to provide the same things for all residents, no matter what race, gender or age they are.

Elite athletes and higher income residents have access to multiple facilities and geographic areas outside of the City. Lower-income families do not have
We know the stats with academics and wealth gaps. Let's make sure we are closing the gaps with appropriate ACCESS to all services in our community.

It is important to work towards fixing the inequitable way in which our world was created by the founders many years ago. Everyone deserves the right to feel safe and have equal access to the resources and services we provide.

Boulder Parks & Rec should be felt to be accessible by all, and enjoyed by all.

Do I really have to tell you this?

Equity is an issue in Boulder's baseball program because kids have to get to SCP. Many don't have ways.

Equity is universally important, regardless of department, focus, etc.

It seems like our Boulder bubble does not include much diversity. If we can help this imbalance by allowing more inclusivity in our programs and services, all the better.

The global Covid-19 pandemic has shown us that WE ARE ALL CONNECTED. Equal access for all is of paramount importance and Boulder should lead the way in this.

NBLL, SBLL, BVL, etc. support kids of all income levels with scholarships. Kids sports is an opportunity to even the playing field. Upper income kids can travel to other towns, pay for upgraded sports experiences etc. A city park is the one opportunity to quite literally, "even the playing field." I would love to have a nice, safe place for kids of all income levels to come together, play, and interact.

Not addressing equity means that when we provide more resources we only increase disparity.

Nature and exercise are so important to health and community vitality, and Parks and Rec is a huge provider of free recreation in the community - we have to make sure that we're really reaching the people who need us the most.

I hope you will keep digging in during your planning and service delivery processes to engage the whole community and discover why there is still some reluctance to participate by many people... seeking continuous improvement over time. There still appear to be segments of our population that are not represented in the City of Boulder and the PR Department's systems and in the use of its many services, even watching the short video

That Boulder become more diverse in income, age, ethnicity, lifestyle. Make Boulder weird. Honor the differences. Listen carefully.

My hope for the future is that when the Parks & Recreation Department says that it cares about the health and wellness of everyone in the city, you will truly mean everyone - including houseless people, whose health, wellness and safety are currently not only not served, but actively threatened by the department's policy of sweeping. I hope that instead you will work WITH houseless residents of the city, listening to THEIR voices about THEIR needs, and providing better restroom & trash services, which will truly help make parks safer and more welcoming for everyone, including houseless people and the rich white people who complain about them, mistakenly believing that sweeps will do anything but worsen both visible and overall homelessness in the city. Continued connectivity and inclusivity of parks and open space.

Everyone will have an inviting, safe, and entertaining place to gather and exist.

Equity investment in the golf course.

That the city will generate camping areas around the rural city limits, this will allow for a partnership with a company that can maintain and support camping at it's best. and give an option for winter unhoused individuals

Provide safe, inclusive, culturally relevant and welcoming parks, facilities and programs in a way that works to address systemic and historic inequities.
More compassion and tolerance from everyone.

Sliding scale, Spanish speaking staff members, culturally aware/appropriate programming, an environment where all truly do feel welcomed.

Continued/growing support for all people to enjoy programs, services, and facilities. Your background, ethnicity, gender, financial status and other self defining characteristics should not be a barrier of participation/access.

I hope that Parks and Recreation facilities will have a model for financial sustainability while also focusing on making our recreation center accessible to the communities of color within Boulder. I hope that we work to listen to communities of color in park planning to ensure what they hope and need in a park is incorporated. I hope that we work to make our facilities and programs welcoming to communities of color, to address the reasons people of color may not feel welcome or safe in the spaces we manage.

That the City will take every opportunity to make reparations and return control over resources to marginalized communities.

That we will have additional resources and staff available to be able to offer information and programs to the less served population and individuals who don't speak English.

Boulder needs to be a leader in making equality and equity as part of our fabric. It can become one of our greatest strengths.

It would be great if the Department of Parks and Recreation reached out to communities of faith and invited them to build connections among themselves and with other groups by using the parks as a place to start on a common task (fall clean-up?). Equality and the Peace that it brings for all living beings.

Programs designed that are actually helpful and worth it and not just a "program" to check the systematic/racial issue box as a "good deed" and the city is trying to do their part. Needs to actually DO the work. and have it actually WORK and be successful.

I hope the city and Parks and Rec can see their way to help Studio Arts Boulder continue with their vision for the artistic development of the community.

More bipoc outreach

My hope for the I/DD community is that people will start listening to the individuals with disabilities and their families and care providers so more programming can be developed to meet their needs.

Barrier reduction (transportation, providing sports equipment, location of programs)

A vision from science fiction novels of the past where people of all races work together toward a great enterprise of interest to all human beings.

Equal opportunities for all user groups (young and old alike) in accessible locations that don't require owning a car.

That equal exposure and availability to studio arts, with subsequent equal community exposure to finished works, establish similar shared experiences, and help the usually very distinct social groups find common interests

Boulder is clearly a place where the majority white and economically well off and physically fit can safely and easily find recreation opportunities. My hope and vision is that Boulder will also grow opportunities that attract and welcome people who cannot afford or want to commit to fancy club sports or expensive equipment. I'm thinking of things that small towns provide such as community dinners, parades, fairs, roller skating rinks, playgrounds, community art, pocket parks.

Pickleball is so popular because it accommodates a wide range of physical capabilities. It is a good balance of exercise and fun. This promotes "Equity" and inclusiveness. I routinely play with individuals that span 40 years in age. This is unheard of (impossible) in other sports and group activities like league play. It is so cool! Women are very well represented (sometimes a majority) and often very skilled and competitive. Those not typically "sporty" become addicted. It is easy to get started. Potentially broader interest across many demographics. Newcomers are very much welcomed getting started and participated in groups, but lack of court availability is, unfortunately, a seriously limiting factor to the otherwise inclusivity of pickleball.

#6 describes things I hope will keep changing for the better
How the pandemic’s economic impact will affect rec center funding.

I think BPR and the city in general is very aware that this is an important lens and focus area. I’m pretty confident that they/we will make progress as long as the education and the conversation never stops.

That Boulder lock out the less privileged by not offering park and wellness services for them.

I’m worried that budget cuts will create further limits on the number of people who can access financial support programs through the rec. I think that there is often greater diversity in the lower-income bracket and don’t want to see that diversity lost due to budget cuts.

How will we address past inequities

Having Boulder become too elite and closing down opportunities for others...

That we are not represented. That we will continue to be treated as invisible

Societal breakdown

That money will be diverted away from encouraging equity to pay for expansion

That white and straight and male voices will continue to be heard, respected, and speak the loudest in these spaces and decisions

Don't just cut programs based on money - consider if there are private offerings that are both welcoming and affordable before cutting. Gymnastics team: Yes, there are private gyms, but they focus on elite performance and are expensive. Boulder's team welcomes all abilities and is the most affordable. It also doesn't require 30 hours of practice from children each week. The Y doesn't have a team. Other gyms seem to be set up to find the next olympian, not to offer a supportive team environment for all abilities and incomes.

One main concern is that some do not like to give up power/authority.
Historically, areas are restricted to specific users. My concern is that this will increase, and multi-use trails will continue to decline.

People who do not have internet, computers are left out of the Boulder community. How do we get those people included?

Right now Boulder Revised Code 5-6-10 prohibits people from "activities of daily living, such as eating or sleeping", with specific exception for the "recreational" forms of these activities, "napping or picnicking". Thus the most basic human acts of food and rest, things that should be connecting us to the land, are banned from parks except for those for whom they are a luxury, who could be performing those acts in private places they have access to. ( "The law, in its majestic equality, forbids rich and poor alike to sleep under bridges, to beg in the streets, and to steal their bread." — Anatole France)

When Black people are 12 times more likely than white people are to be homeless in Boulder, and Indigenous people 7 times more likely (https://www.mdhi.org/state_of_homelessness_2020 ), the criminalization of survival is for all intents and purposes a fundamentally racist policy, and its enforcement in Boulder parks entrenches and worsens existing inequity. I am EXTREMELY CONCERNED by Director Rhodes' proposal to direct funds to full-time positions dedicated to chasing homeless people back-and-forth across the city (as the permanent indefinite status of the employment means that even she acknowledges that doing so is a futile endeavor that will never reduce the root causes of homelessness). I am concerned by the decision to, in an official Parks Dept. presentation to city council, refuse to mention that sweeps evict HUMAN BEINGS, instead solely referring to "encampments" by the size of "debris" (ie, people's worldly belongings). I am concerned by her push for a skatepark under the library as a form of hostile architecture, which is such a bafflingly wrongheaded idea that it suggests Director Rhodes has either never seen a skatepark or never seen the bottom of the library, as it has about the clearance of a standard building floor and anything resembling a skatepark would not fit & would result in people skating head-first directly into the ceiling. I am concerned by the thoughtlessness, rapid, unexamined push for the exclusion of houseless people that this proposal betrays. I am concerned that the overrepresented voices of the rich & powerful will continue to drown out the voices of working-class and poor people who are unable to fill out forms like this, whether due to lack of internet access (especially when they are chased out of wi-fi zones such as Central Park), or other barriers such as being overwhelmed with stress and work. I am concerned that you will take what I have written here and ignore it, or bundle it into "citizens are concerned about equity and human rights" but continue to DO exactly the wrong things.

The loss or degradation of parks due to poorly managed or overlooked space.

| Anonymous       | 2/19/2021 11:00 AM | My concern is that if the City keeps up its policy of funding Parks and Recreation at a bare maintenance level, then participants in any number of sports will find their ability to recreate in or on "free" public fields, courts, and facilities severely curtailed. Which will only contribute to a "you have to pay

Seniors have to adapt and change to remain physically active. Many seniors are forced to transition from tennis/racquetball to pickleball. The USA
Pickleball Association (USAPA) has found that the sport has seen a 650 percent increase in members since 2013, and as of 2018 had 3.1 million players in the U.S. Sadly, Boulder's Parks and Recreation courts do not reflect this increase. The number of pickleball courts are woefully inadequate to support Boulder's pickleball population. The outdated paradigm of tennis being king is still reflected in the disproportionate number of tennis vs. pickleball courts.

Q23 "Resilience: Why is this important?"

Anonymous
2/03/2021 10:55 AM

Duh. The future won't look much like the past, given climate change and the social evolution underway in the US. All city departments need to be flexible and adaptive going forward.
I'm thinking about environmental resilience. The ability for natural areas to absorb floodwaters would help protect communities.

Drainage, debris clearance, etc to prepare property to better handle environment impacts.

Nature provides us many benefits. But, depending your philosophy, it can also harm us through floods and fire. We always need to be smart about promoting the long-term natural processes over short-term fiscal impacts which can be politically charged too.

Changes and challenges are a feature of a healthy, "living", evolving system like the PR Department.

If it doesn't last, what's the point.

It is important that the parks department is able to effectively deal with climate change and the challenges it will, and does, pose, for the safety of our community and the survival of our parks.

Similar to financial sustainability, stresses to the system like climate change threaten to impact the viability of our parks. Our city staff and community members need to be planning for ways to mitigate these impacts and also adapt to them by finding new ways to keep our parks and tree canopy healthy.

Because we really are growing. And COVID for example is getting more people outside. That's a lot of extra usage.

climate change

The Pandemic has shown the need to "roll with the...punches."

2020 fires and covid made me realize that environmental change and societal changes can really affect every day life, and impact the futures for our children. We need to know and have a plan of how we can help support those in need when changes like this happen.

It's the opposite of collapse. P&R is showing it throughout the pandemic. Good job.

Our system needs to be able to respond to new demographics and climate impacts.

Climate change is currently, and will continue to impact our natural areas. We

Parks and Rec must build in some resilience into the system for unexpected crises that may occur: a large residential wildfire, other adverse conditions like flooding and pandemics, climate change effects on parks and increasing pests, such as emerald ash borer. If not, the department will be mostly in reaction mode.

Environmental changes are coming.

Drought, flood, fire and more are on the increase. Climate change, nature and the environment should be on the forefront of all conversations.

Very similar to Financial Sustainability - keep the ship steady and afloat, protecting staff and community needs even when things go sideways.

In a pandemic, and post pandemic (eventually) reality, we are currently operating in a deficient for a number of areas. We either need to change how we think about what gets subsidized and why or choose to cut and/or sell activities that are no longer sustaining themselves, regardless of the community benefit. i.e. What resilience is now vs. what it is in a 'normal' year has changed.

In the past decade we have experienced two major crises - flood and pandemic. These crises has flipped staffing and community programming on its head and caused us to have long periods of recovery. PR should make plans so they can respond to crises and diversify funding wherever possible to maintain the necessary staff to survive the inevitable crises in the future.

Life is in such a constant state of flux. Sometimes so minute, other times fairly dramatic. Keeping eyes on the future and needs of constituents balanced with present day seems a way to endure with resilience.

Parks and rec have to be able to respond to changes in climate, social trends, and economic swings.

Boulder really pulled together during the flood. There will be more floods and other weird weather events and we need to be prepared

Cheaper to repair than put in new, a lot of the time

Good planning is always important.
more people = more environmental impact

We need to have migration zones and larger corridors for our animals and plants.

These are crazy times--you have to adapt and be flexible

Boulder needs to change and grow with its population.

Climate change is going to dramatically impact the front range, and already is. Investing in education, mitigation and eco-sustainable practices is a must.

things happen, the current times tell us this, we don't know what funding or support a city will receive from the state or higher level government, ensuring that we take care of what we have, and plan for the future, will make adjusting when needed possible, providing some level of stability to the city and the community in these times that something they count on is still available.

Climate change! As the climate changes on our earth, we may begin to see different weather than what we have been used to in CO. Therefore, it is important that our community makes an effort to become as resilient to fires/floods/droughts/etc as the weather continues to change. Also, as climate changes, we will being to see more "environmental disaster" events. It is important that we as a community are ready for events that may disrupt our environment and ecology.

you must be able to bounce back or adapt - just ask darwin

We need to be able to respond to environmental emergencies like drought, snow storms, wildfires

Adaptabilit

Boulder Open Space and Mountain Parks are an amazing natural resource that we are beyond lucky to have access to. This should be preserved and sustained for centuries to come. Ensuring that governing bodies and the community supports and sustains these amazing resources is imperative for the future development of the town and community.

Parks & Rec, Open Space, Pottery Lab, Rec Centers, etc are important to quality of life (human & nature). I feel they need to be a priority. So having a Parks & Rec that can weather changes is essential.

Because Corona....
Because as the pandemic has shown us, these are uncertain times and we need to move forward expecting the unexpected.

Same comments as above.

The pandemic that we're all living through has made life difficult for many people, particularly arts groups and arts organizations in Boulder. It's a shame that our Park and Rec department hasn't provided ANY options for these groups to hold events safely outdoors on Park and Rec spaces.

Water water water!! Both too much at once and not enough most of the time. City needs to lead the way on consumption, reuse, and proper planning.

Adapt and preserve.

We face new environmental and unforeseen challenges all the time.

We are going to have to respond to a wide variety of challenges, both in our physical environment and in society that will challenge us.

Because nothing stays the same—eg Covid has wrecked many lives and livelihoods; one must try to preserve or rebuild what's good and useful, while adapting.

Be able to change with the ever changing demands.

Climate is changing right now.

Often response to changing demographics is slow; hence, available resources are sometimes not used efficiently.

Floods, Covid, Fires - all these unexpected events remind us of the need for resiliency.

Climate change means we must be ready to protect what we have.

Boulder has a great track record of looking toward the future and honestly anticipating the changes that will come our way due to climate change. Changes are coming faster than anticipated, and we need to keep anticipating them.

We all know that the future is not predictable and our climate is changing. We need to be thinking forward to how BPR functions in future conditions. The recent pandemic has shown how BPR and the City can be affected by a health crisis and as environmental conditions change we may be facing water shortages and warmer average annual temperatures. These changes may put strains on resources that we currently feel we have an abundance of and we need to be able to adapt to changes without it being a surprise to the community.

Climate change is here! What can we do in terms of our parks (planting of trees, xeriscaping, placement of walkways, surfaces, uses/drainage of water, lighting, etc.) to make the city better stewards of the land and try to mitigate against damage to the environment.

Specifically looking at "societal changes" in regards to pickleball. In a nutshell, the sport is exploding and Covid has forced players outside. Even after Covid, many pickleball players prefer playing outside to inside. The bottle has been opened and there's no forcing the genie back in! Our group of ~16 pickleball players at NBRC has been playing consistently ALL winter and have shoveled the courts.

Morgan_Gardner 2/26/2021 08:19 AM

The pandemic made it clear that BPR is especially susceptible to economic downturns, and it was really painful to see so many staff furloughed because of our reliance on sales tax revenue. So many of our services, projects, and facilities have been impacted this year because of it. And because services and projects were paused/delayed/slowed, people are finding other ways to recreate, or else suffering without.

Anonymous 2/26/2021 08:30 AM

Well, after this past year, it seems obvious that resilience is critical with regard to facilities, but also protecting our trails/parks. The future is unknown and the ability to respond to minor as well as major changes could make or break the parks and rec department.

Anonymous 2/26/2021 08:54 AM

I would like our parks and rec to be sustainable into the future.

Anonymous 2/26/2021 09:43 AM

If anything, this last year has shown that we need to be resilient and continue to figure out how to connect the community when we can't be around each other.
Climate change is real, as are economic forces that require resiliency.

Areas need to be able to absorb the shocks and stressors of environmental and societal changes.

Need to continue responsible environmental stewardship.

With climate change and extreme weather happenings, I feel like this is important.

The P&R system continues to play its essential role in community health and well-being.

Thoughtful planning in regards to wildlife corridors.

That there's a balance between use/environmental impact and maintenance/prevention.

Promoting the natural processes and lessening our own impacts. Continue to provide ecological economic studies to the public - really assists in transparency between stakeholders and general education.

I hope that the PR Department will continue to be able to manage to the mission during times of challenge, and keep it's core alive despite these rough periods. As a keen, interested observer of how the department has been adapting through the coronavirus pandemic, I get the sense that the current systems are resilient enough to survive at a core level... a strong base and continuous learning have helped the department "know" how to do this.

We have amenities and features that last, and we can maintain, for generations.

I am hopeful that the department will be proactive in handling climate change, using community outreach programs to their advantage. I would like to see indigenous leaders consulted on this issue especially.

To Maintain what we have.
Plan/budget for maintenance on current parks, especially those that are high use.

Open spaces thrive as our climate shifts more data collection for planning and utilization purposes, better IT system programming, smart policy changes for benefit of city residents and not anyone that happens to drive from another regional city

I hope that we all get to know our communities better and work with each other to overcome the impacts of climate change.

I hope P and R starts cooperating more closely with the Transportation Department to reduce the number of single car trips to parks and recreation facilities. If RTD would allow dogs on buses in off peak hours, we could ride buses to the dog parks and mountain parks trail heads. How about running shuttle buses to the EB center? I hope we get the East Senior Center open and functioning again, as soon as practically possible.

That we can incorporate some soil reclamation practices, allow for more diverse gardens and incorporate plants that take in the carbon dioxide.

That this will be more than a catch phrase and the department will integrate it better.

This one isn't as glamorous or flashy, but that with circumspect planning, the department can minimize layoffs and service reductions in the face of future shocks. Flush years could be used to further stabilize funds and resources.

A clear direction for how to recovery from catastrophe, and how to maintain the most important things we do through it. Additionally, how to know what to let go of because we can't afford to hold on to everything.

I would hope that in the future crises we can survive with fewer lay offs and less programming interruption.

that we'll be able to add things that will benefit our environment and our community

I hope that our department can explore ways to proactively plan for when environmental changes occur. I am hopeful that we can address issues such as drought, waste management, air quality, dark sky changes, and fire by changing our department’s behavior and current practices. For example, many of the vehicles at Park Ops run on diesel and staff will leave their cars running for 20+ minutes to heat them up in the morning. As vehicles come up for replacement, our department can make it a goal to transition to cleaner or more hybrid-type vehicles. Our department can also make it a goal to replace all trash-only receptacles with the compost-recycle-trash containers by 2025. We can work on limiting water use and explore using rain barrels to water the gardens outside each rec center. We can replace all non-dark sky compliant lighting with light bulbs that are under 3000K, on timers, point downward, etc. Even changing our behaviors and practices slightly, I believe our department could save money, be better prepared, and ultimately be more resilient when environmental stressors do occur.

Seems to me, if we don't shift with the moving sands of change, services could become obsolete or moving with leaving larger portions of other needs behind. This would coincide with making services relevant to most and financially more sound.

That we expedite management of our forests so that we will have fewer wildfires. Breathing smoke is harmful to all.

People don't move w technology

None for now.

Fires, loss of trees and animals, indiscriminate treatment of prairie dogs.

That the population growth with destroy our outdoor environments.

That the voices who make decisions for the city have open ears and are representing the community and not their own ideals.

I have concerns about how increased population will impact our environment. Sensitive ecosystems including flora and fauna should be of utmost importance! I worry that with increased population, these ecosystems may be further disrupted. Increased trail maintenance so people are more likely to stay on trails, increased "limited areas" for important species habitat would increase flora/fauna ecosystems.

Wildfires, climate change, transients, overuse and increased population stressing our parks and ecosystems. I want a safe place with a healthy landscape for my young family.

Overuse and misplaced priorities

That rising taxes and costs will make the city unaffordable for seniors and ordinary working stiffs.

Not being able to pivot quickly to societal demands and changes.

That what we have will not be relevant budget-based excuses for not getting the work done

Our country has removed History as a core requirement of our Education system. We don't have a prayer to tackle our future without understanding our past. This includes all views, not just white, male, war victors. If we learn from our mistakes, we can be resilient in this time of change.

That expediency or obstinancy will doom us to not being prepared for the future.

Climate change and poor industry & personal behavior people stop paying attention to the land.

Being able to handle increasing demand for services

That managers are not adept to change and do not focus on resilience. While watering and pesticides have been reduced, planting are not always native species, there is too much low cut grass in many parks and there is not enough shade for summer enjoyment of many parks.

I am concerned that our department will fault to "reactive" processes because changing the status quo is hard work and challenging. I do have hope though that we can work on solutions (even small ones!) that can make our city more resilient.

That budget cuts are going to change the options we have in the future.
That you will go with easier choices.

We are allowing our Parks to degrade because of social and political squabbling, and our refusal to enforce long established policies. We enforce residential zoning and construction codes, but we refuse to enforce policies on park usage. And as a result, the resilience of our outdoor space is dying.

That the Park and Rec department will not adapt to the current reality, and stay set in its inefficient 20th century ways, and just doing the same old, same old.

Finite resource protection

Wildlife is not able to adapt.

Flood, snow, heat. Wind

We don't.

That Boulder will become even more of an echo chamber of wealthy people on the left and right fighting over prairie dogs instead of serving residents' down to earth needs.

Too many people and dogs.

Overuse combined with fires, and climate change.

N/A

Money. Planning ahead can be expensive. Texas is our current example.

Human overuse and off-trail use comes first to my mind.

That fostering a community sensibility around streetscapes and parks is left in the hands of too few of our citizens

I worry that when leagues start, there will be competition for courts and the casual family players and young twenties will get discouraged.

Balancing short term desires with long term needs.

Develop of parks and open space for commercial reasons.

It's hard to create a culture of adaptation and change while supporting people in career development. Jobs will change and evolve and that should be welcomed but staff but also accommodated strategically by supervisors and leadership and then supported with personal development opportunities. Resiliency will improve not when there's more staff turnover but when staff at all levels feel a part of the community and integrated into goal of creating a healthy and vibrant community culture. Expertise and culture can both be learned and should co-exist.

That parks will exploit rather than protect the public lands

I am concerned that Parks and Rec is beginning to become unduly focused on financial and profit centers at the expense of their core, critical focuses including appropriate types of planning for resilience as mentioned above.

That water shortages will become a more frequent thing and certain parks will suffer because irrigation will have to be cut. Boulder has some of the most beautiful parks along the Front Range, but some of those parks may need to be "let go" as turf areas may not be able to be maintained. Issues like this may be difficult for the public to accept.

This is easy to say and hard to do - for any organization

There is great resistance to adding more pickleball courts, saying that the data doesn't support this. That's not true. You're comparing apples to oranges. Look at the reservations for pickleball vs. tennis at the SAME times. During the heat of the day, few people play either tennis or pickleball. Additionally, since pickleball will continue to be played outdoors ALL year long, the courts should be maintained (shoveled). All the other facilities get maintained (pool, gym, sidewalks, etc.). The courts should be snowblown. Parks & Rec has said that this is not a financial issue - so why has it taken SO long? The restriping of Chautauqua has taken over 6 months to do correctly. The addition of inside pickleball nets at NBRC took over 2 YEARS. Drop in members had data to prove that many times on their allotted days, there were 20+ pickleball players, playing on 2 courts, until the Rec Center finally added one additional net.

Acquiring more space for parks and maintain them.
Develop a thorough analysis of the REAL costs of operating and maintaining the system and build community support for full funding.

More tennis courts! With COVID, tennis is becoming increasingly popular - racket sales are up 25+%

CREATE DOG PARKS in all neighborhoods!!! Or welcome off leash play in existing parks.

Ideally, I would love some of our youth programs to be as good as private clubs so more low income youth are able to participate in high school sports more shuttles to trails with more easily accessed info on how to use a shuttle. I've lived here 8 years and still don't know how to take the Chautauqua shuttle

Community activities in the parks...star gazing. Yoga, book clubs, picnics, dancing, music not just downtown! In each neighborhood no motorized water craft on the rez. They are so noisy and it is such a small place. It would be so much more enjoyable if it was like Union reservoir. Paddling seems more in line with health too.

Involving the youth and the seniors w/ the general public. I would like to see some progress made with this - I think it would benefit the relations between the new (likely, non-natives) and Boulderites (both non-native and native to CO).

Engage with community groups to sponsor events, and make those known across the community

Another big water option. Whether it's cleaning Viele Lake for paddleboarding or planning to invest in another big outdoor pool, there are not nearly enough outdoor water options - especially for youth

Acknowledging the depth and complexity of social and individual challenges that drive some people to take up residency in, or otherwise occupy many public park spaces in ways that exclude other users, please do not give up trying to be part of the emerging solution by creative, compassionate implementation of policy and best practices for public health and safety.

Keep up the ongoing efforts and double down on strong leadership behaviors and communication in support of the staff involved in these ongoing efforts and frequently demonstrate the efforts to the community. The more publicly these issues are communicated, the more the community understands how much it takes to sustain these efforts and perhaps begins to engage towards solutions rather than criticize staff/departments. Continue working in collaboration with all relevant city departments, to support safe, sanitary conditions in our urban parks and associated public spaces. Continue to do the hard work involved in helping people who often occupy parks and other public areas due to their own hardships to have other options. Best wishes going forward

I honestly think BPR does a great job already and I’d hate to add more work to anyone’s plate (see previous responses about limited resources), but... here’s a thought: I think we take for granted that so much of this community is active and healthy, but I would love to see an education campaign on how daily activity (with an emphasis on outdoor activity and fresh air, given the pandemic) is physically and mentally beneficial. And I think it would be more helpful to emphasize all the ways in which this can be done simply and easily. Spending 30 minutes in a neighborhood park with your child before they begin their homework, walking one of our multi-use paths during your lunch break, a 1-hour swim in one of our lap pools in the early evening, etc. And maybe highlighting the smaller properties/spaces like our pocket parks (encouraging community members to give a shoutout to their favorite pocket park). So many in Boulder think “physical activity” and assume this means a full day of downhill skiing (time consuming and expensive) or climbing a mountain (not everyone’s cup of tea). I personally think the community could benefit from refocusing on the opportunities for physical activity and fresh air that are right at our fingertips and can easily be woven into a busy day. It might also be a great way to encourage the folks in our community who are not active and need encouragement but feel overwhelmed by Boulder’s “Uber athlete” community. I know a lot of this work is done through the rec centers and the wide range of programming there, but would love to see this extended to outdoor spaces and non-programmed activity.

I mentioned this earlier, but I'd like to see more nature trails, bioswales, and other water ways to manage water, give a little back to wildlife, and have less lawn to manage. The southern 1/3 of North Boulder Park is usually soggy and unusable, and flood waters regularly sweep through and push away the mulch on the playground. Adding bioswales and natural vegetation along the waterways could help. The nature trail at Crest View Park is a good example.

I play pretty much every sport. For the most part I feel the municipality has done well with providing amenities for the space they are given. I never struggle to find a tennis court or a place to shoot hoops etc. with only one exception: pickleball. The game is getting so popular so fast that, assuming no additional courts are constructed, the pickleball players will be mobbing the front desk of every rec center demanding more space to play. I jest, of course, but the game isn't going anywhere. Erie community park is able to ink 4 pickleball courts on to a single tennis court (16 people for ONE court). If Boulder P&R could figure out a way to do that they would appease the pickleball community without diminishing the number of tennis courts or having to construct something new.

All I can think of is related to this stupid pandemic that has kept me away from my daily routine. It's too much hassle -- and I've become comfy in my lazy rut -- to make reservations, go to the rec center, pay even though I had an annual pass, limit myself to an hour, etc. Aside from pandemic-related issues? Probably educate our citizenry on (1) invasive species and the need to eradicate or control them, and (2) the natural order, like cute things do get eaten by predators, fires do happen, etc. Not to say that we should encourage killing or wildfires, but the perceived need (some would say overreaction) to protect every single living thing is getting us into trouble.

Create Pickleball courts
Ban camping in city parks, so parents are not scared to take their children to them.

Create a landscape (tees, sandtraps, beauty) improvement plan for the golf course.

Help the city improve its recognition and mitigation of institutional biases toward marginalized community members and prospective community members.

As above tools to help spread out the people across all the open space

To ensure user satisfaction. Perhaps Parks and Rec could do better about asking users for feedback, utilizing various means to do this.

Pickleball

Allocate funding to repair what we have, not to new projects collect detailed data concerning usage and demographics to better plan and manage recreational trends and budgets, including ways to better accommodate Boulder city residents rather than the increasing influx of non-City residents

Big Idea? Not a clue. I like the parks now. I enjoy everything about 'em. Ok, how about this. A water park for dogs. Twin Lakes is lovely, but we could use another one that's similar. A place where dogs and owners could work out together. Did I really just type that? I'm brainstorming - you asked for it!

Expand and manage Pickleball courts recognizing this fast growing sport

Offering low-income children subsidized clinics on various sports to increase their opportunity and participation.

Plan to replace the South Boulder Rec Center, making it a community center more like the North Boulder center or the Louisville center. Be sure to include a large warm water pool and plenty of classes for seniors to use it.

Add a unhoused/encampment task force to the police dept/housing and human services. We only expect this situation to grow. We need to find the solutions to drug use and get people the real help - not just moving them
As COVID has shown there needs to be a shift from indoor activities and sports to a more inclusive program that includes unscheduled outdoor activities/passive recreation.

continue to be flexible and adaptable to the changing landscape of needs and how those needs are being meet

RE-OPEN the East Boulder Rec Ctr.

Build a dedicated, outdoor, lighted pickleball complex with at least eight courts. This can be a revenue stream as it would support tournament play. In addition, please paint at least 10 more pickleball courts on existing city tennis courts. At this time, Boulder does not have enough pickleball courts to meet the demand and anticipated growth. Up to four pickleball courts can fit on one tennis court, meaning that the city can serve 16 citizens playing pickleball on one tennis courts versus 2-4 tennis players on the same court. There are 36 city tennis courts, 31 dedicated to tennis; there are 12 pickleball courts, none of which are dedicated to pickleball (i.e., all are shared with other sports). Help, please!

Build a regulation 400m track! Boulder is a mecca for competitive athletes, including amateurs, and somehow all the existing tracks, which are owned by educational institutions publicly funded or not, are off-limits.

Implement sliding scale. Ensure the right people get the right subsidy rather than all those who qualify getting all subsidy and others who don’t quite getting nothing.

Refreshing of facilities to keep the current.

Invest in the facilities and staff. Improve the status of facilities and rehire positions that were cut in 2020. Creates a better experience for users while also dispersing the work load to ensure participant needs are taken care of.

Examine how our recreation centers will look into the new future - how will we serve the community in this new more virtual life and how do we ensure it is sustainable.

Events, workshops, organized kids’ activities, etc., in Eben Fine Park. It is already a great park but I envision it becoming an iconic nationally acclaimed park especially considering Tube to Work Day.

Recognize that City governments should not be run like the rest of the free Ditch the breakeven budget mentality and look at taxpayer dollars as investment in the common good and the City's role in reparations for marginalized communities.

Take motorized boats off the Boulder Reservoir while increasing other non-motorized floatation sports.

An indoor sports complex similar to the sport stable in superior that could be a central hub for indoor sports and leagues.

Add Pickleball Courts

Pickleball is a rapidly growing sport that encourages those of us older than 60 to remain active and take care of our health. I don't know how many people have given up on it, but if Parks and Recreation could ADD to the previous availability, I believe it would encourage its growth.

add a large pickleball complex, it's the fastest-growing sport in the US and brings in a lot of money with tournaments and pickleball camps.

Consider giving the Pottery Lab building to Studio Arts Boulder provided that Studio Arts Boulder operate it as a Pottery Lab for the length of a typical mortgage, say 30 years.

Build more pickle ball courts.

Stay afloat. Charge those who use the services ...including open space. So many people must be putting burdens on the care of the facilities and land.

Look at other communities - as mentioned Littleton

Realize that the needs of the community have changed and be able to react to those needs quickly. I can not believe that a place like Boulder is so behind in the development of pickleball courts.

Add a large pickleball facility with dedicated and lighted courts.

Take care of what we have and help make sure that everyone knows about our resources, not just those who have a computer and internet access

Serve all groups and offer programs tailored to all abilities not just athletes

Pickleball facilities

Continue to expand spaces for public art education and access. The Pottery Studio in Chautauqua is a city treasure. And creating other spaces like it would be a boon to our city.

Work with other communities to join parks together.

Excellence in programing

Significant expansion on more youth dedicated activities and facilities both indoor, e.g. pottery classes and outdoor, e.g. Chautauqua story time, and programs that will not be easily overtaken by other segment of general public.

I would like to see park planners and managers educated about the needs of kids with sensory issues and to make parks sensory-friendly. Find out about playgrounds of the future and what would be needed - roofs over play equipment that let light in but not dangerous sun exposure.

Help support social bonds within the community, with programs for all, but especially for families and seniors by improving our lives and enhancing our leisure time.

Radically expanding play spaces for kids.

Get past the pandemic and re-open and operate just as we did before Covid.

Maybe expand parking along the open space trails? I would like to see Parks and Rec keep the pottery studio.

I'm not sure - but I would be open to hearing what others having to say and giving my feedback on what I think would be most beneficial to the community.

Stop the CU South program expansion.

Tourism is obviously important but in the past 10-20 years I feel local Boulder County communities have been neglected. Chautauqua and Flatiron Trail areas can barely keep up with demand to the point of abuse. The building of new hotels on 28th st where a park or rec center could have been built is a great example. Some amenity ideas: Ninja course (drop-in and classes), ropes course, mini bowling lanes, interactive wall/floor games, soccer pool tables, etc. Some other ideas regarding the Rec Centers: Develop an after-hours entry or pass system, for individuals to use the cardio/weight areas. Some places give out key fobs or id cards to members that only work through certain doors. Not sure how this would work for closing off access to other parts of the facilities, but would be a big benefit for those individuals who can't always work out during normal hours. It could also maybe help with cost savings as staff wouldn't need to be onsite. Provide more functional fitness &amp; &quot;Olympic&quot; lifting opportunities - none of the recreation centers really provide adequate space for deadlifts/snatch/cleans. The fitness equipment improvements at the South Center are a plus and moving in the right direction. |

Parks and Rec and the city of Boulder could help Studio Arts Boulder financially with the development and building of the new facility. This would benefit a large portion of the community.

Attention and refresh of our parks

More parking

Buy and conserve more area. Local composting facility

Allowing hunting in Boulder owned parks teach the relationship between healthy land and the plants/animals on the land.

Finish the new art building on diagonal and maintain hiking trails

Plant trees and flowering shrubs.

More education and programs regarding climate change.

I believe that "taking care of what we have" is the most beneficial thing the Parks and Recreation Department can do.

More outdoor opportunities. Adult fitness equipment, youth parks, skate, etc.

more classes, programs, rec leagues for kids and adults

PickleBall complex

Creating more ways for those kids on free and reduced lunch to access the parks and especially the open spaces outside of the city proper.

When it is safe, resume EXPAND programming at the level it was at a year ago and then work steadily to increase it.

Youth programming

Something Parks & Rec already does but I'd like to see them do more of: events (health-oriented and otherwise) that take place at the various rec centers that tie in the community. Ten years ago I took my then-8-year old daughter to North for the Father-Daughter Dance. We've taken our dog to Scott Carpenter for the year end dog pool party. I love that Fairview has its after-prom at East. Keep these ideas coming! Tie in young people and health. Get the gym teachers from Mesa and Boulder to do something at South with their kiddos while Foothill and Crest View do something at North. Tie in activities for pre-teens (the overlooked group between elementary and high school).

Build out Valmont Park. Now! It will be such a treasure and will be an anchor for the future development areas.

Open an indoor roller skating rink! One that is big enough to have an indoor skatepark, a smaller rink for birthday parties, and a bigger rink for community events and roller derby! The nostalgia of roller skating attracts older and middle aged participants, kids love it, it's an easy activity that can be done for an hour or every day. Participants can skate on their own or in groups, speed skate, skate dance and roller derby. Black and queer skaters are credited for a recent resurgence in popularity.

Charge non-residents a fee to park at all trailheads. Use this money to fund maintenance and improvements. All dog owners who want to walk off-leash should be required to have their dog’s DNA on file to enforce compliance with proper disposal of their dog waste. (Voluntary compliance is not working).

Built out south Valmont host youth sports tournaments so they don't have to travel so far

Demonstrate kindness and inclusiveness in everything you do

Expand rec centers. Too small. Improve fitness classes. Coming from the ymca system, the YCMA puts the whimpy limited fitness classes to shame.

Expand the land and don't give up any open space.

Pickleball facility with lots of pickleball courts and maybe even lights...
Embrace the fastest growing sport in America, Pickleball—with a facility that can accommodate our weather year round.

Renovate the Recreation centers.

Pickleball courts in multiple parks

Pickleball courts

Tap into the love the community has for parks to improve their care.

Don't have one in mind at the current moment

Designated Pickleball Courts

Be inclusive of seniors. Don’t just relegate them to senior centers, Jewish centers, church centers. They pay taxes and should have programs they’re interested in, not just youth programs.

Work with the City of Boulder to find a solution to the homeless problem plaguing our city parks. Whether that’s more enforcement, or some progressive program to assist these individuals, something needs to be done. When many of our parks and public areas are considered unsafe by the public, we have a serious problem that needs to be addressed.

How about a mentorship program where students could earn credits. This could be with the public schools and perhaps CU students. A diverse population of students could create greater understanding for both parties, students and the Boulder community.

Somehow reach out post-Covid and help build community fun and friendships using the parks. Have parties and fun activities!

Start raising funds by charging parking fees
Make safer bike lanes and paths and trails to get there...add more parks and open space!!!

Taking care of what we have.

More Pickleball courts, indoor and outdoor.

As mentioned before, with the advent of pickleball popularity, with the growth of adult and children tennis programs in the City, and with the on and off withdrawal of school district courts from the public tennis court pool, tennis courts have reached a state of critical overcrowding. And the City hasn't done itself any favors by failing to build any new tennis courts in over two decades, despite the fact that neighboring communities like Longmont, Arvada, and Thornton, have all added nice new multi-court tennis centers in recent years. (Note: in the 2014 Valmont Park use survey, tennis courts were the second most used field or facility in the Parks and Rec system, behind only open park space.) I think the time is ripe for Boulder to step up and recognize this large portion of its active population by partnering with available community and national partners (such as getting a USTA grant) to create a Boulder Racquet Sports center with multiple lighted courts for the tennis and pickleball communities.

Create sustainability in their budget. Create programming that can support the departments budget in hardship, and to be able to support other areas of the department that are a free service to the community.

To meet increasing demand, please install more pickleball courts and include some dedicated outdoor courts. Boulder is the only community in the area that has none.

Simple community programming. Concert in the park or some such thing that could create revenue to support other endeavors.

Incorporate less manicured environments in Boulder Parks. Having "wilder" elements right in town would encourage more creative play (as opposed to team sports, etc.) and more interest in the nearby even wilder areas.

Address noise and light pollution at your parks.

Limit dogs.

Work on bringing individuals in the community together in conversations around nature, our city, and recreation.

Tennis! We have such a huge tennis community, there's not enough courts for all of us and many of the existing ones could use some love! I think it's pretty unanimous amongst the community that we'd love a community indoor facility. Other surrounding cities have done it. It's important that tennis not be exclusively a rich persons sport. It's such a healthy, social activity, loved by many people all over the world, and as long as the courts are public, it's a relatively inexpensive sport once you own a racquet. I can't believe the prices at the tennis clubs. They're laughably obscene. Wait lists, high price deposits, high monthly fee, PLUS court time fee! What? Who affords that? Really really rich people. Which is great. But everyone else would love to keep playing through the winter as well. Parker, Arvada, Denver - are all examples of places that have indoor facilities that you pay to use but not thousands of dollars.

Improve & increase court facilities for tennis players and pickle ball players. The growth in tennis has increased pressure on the limited courts in Boulder, and the growth in pickle ball has further squeezed the tennis community in terms of both court availability and league play (since leagues cannot be played on courts with pickle ball lines). A public indoor court facility would be fantastic, but for sure a facility with 5 or more courts for league play would be wonderful!

More and better maintained public tennis courts. This means more tennis opportunities for kids and adults on public courts don't discriminate by age, gender, ethnicity or financial status. Equity and youth engagement are important to this community, and having more courts to play on contributes to both. WIND SCREENS and snow removal could keep tennis courts open on many more days each year, regardless of the weather.

Build a new tennis center that includes separate pickle ball courts and indoor courts that are public and affordable for all especially kids and families. Tennis is perceived as a rich country club sport but that is way outdated and harmful to the overall sport and benefits for all generations. Tennis is the most played adult recreational sport in the country and Colorado is the biggest active population of players. Most of these players are playing on public courts as they can't afford private club status. It is also a sport that can be played from 3 years old to 90 so it is a lifetime sport. When you start kids early they generally play it their whole life. What other sport can you think of that has all this?

Put more emphasis on resource protection and education for the Boulder Reservoir area by hiring a ranger position to enforce rules and protect the City's drinking water from harmful aquatic nuisance species and land degradation that leads to diminished water quality. I could see this being a partnership with Public Works as I think it is in their best interest to protect the water that Boulder citizens drink and the infrastructure that is in place in the reservoir. However, it is BPR's responsibility to manage the land around the water body and the health of those lands has a direct impact on the quality of the water in the reservoir where people recreate and get their drinking water.

Boulder Tennis Facilities are in moderate-condition, and this palls in comparison to other nearby communities (where courts are not only available, but in vastly better condition). Boulder has a large community of tennis players/enthusiasts (in the thousands!) -- why has this health-generating activity been encouraged in other communities and not Boulder? I'm happy to pay the high taxes here in Boulder, but this is a use for tax monies that would serve many and even make our community more appealing.

| Anonymous | Would like to see elements that directly support North Boulder Little League in the plan. After 6+ years with a little leaguer, I know first hand it is an inclusive organization that welcomes all genders and skill levels with low fees to participate. With the continued rise of ridiculously expensive team sports, little league is for kids to just come out and play and Iris fields has been my son's home away from home for years. I fully support the NBLL board ideas noted below: Greater use of Stazio Fields: NBLL would love to utilize more time at the Stazio baseball complex, especially to add night games under the lights for the older kids. Improve Tom Watson Park: The fields there are poor quality, not well maintained and for every 1 hour my son spent there, I spent 2 hours picking burrs out of my sons clothes or worse yet, nursing a sprained ankle from the uneven outfield. Could you consider concrete walkways, built up spectator stands, improved bathroom and concession areas, new fencing, better drainage and addition of lighting. With increased investment, Tom Watson Park could compare to BPR’s complexes like Stazio and Mapleton. Improve North Boulder Park: NBP is spectacular, but needs drainage and leveling improvements, or simply better maintenance of the grass. BPR puts significant funding into maintaining their “complex” facilities (Stazio, Mapleton), but relatively little into their satellite sites (North Boulder Park,
Tom Watson Park. If the status quo of very limited access to the primary complexes continues for NBLL, please improve the upkeep of the satellite fields like NBP. Long term plan for Iris Fields: Please allow this to remain a baseball complex. It creates meaningful experiences for hundreds of families, whether their boys and girls play for fun or become all star state champs. As previously noted, my son grew up on that field and still goes there with buddies to practice throwing and base running. We need places like this for our kids spend their time OFF THEIR PHONES.

You all own land at Valmont Park and Area 3 (off of 28th), it would be a real community benefit if this land was developed to expand kids sports, with turf fields to help manage the weather, newer facility for fans and families, and to have the fields be set up with more flexibility in use, so baseball, soccer, lacrosse, rugby, and other sports can be played.

Promote a large fundraising and service event where local parents are able to give back to Boulder Parks and Recreation to improve the facilities their children are using for youth sports. With the realization of how important youth sports are to the development of kids, parents are spending an increasing amount of time and money on youth sports. Improving the facilities, and access to the facilities, is something parents will be willing to donate time and money to.

Options: 1. Take some of the land owned (near Gateway park for example) and create a world-class sports complex that will be able to be used by kids (not like Stazio) for multiple sports (baseball, lacrosse, football, etc.) 2.
Massively upgrade places like Iris, and actually take control of its maintenance, allow children to play at Stazio (it's criminal the best fields are reserved for older men).

Separate the dog parks down into more areas! Although most of them have "big" and "small" dog areas, either area might have poorly behaved dogs, and it's nice to be able to leave one area and go to another when there are problem dogs around. My dog is right around 30 lbs so he goes in either when we need, but he won't be forever and most dogs should only be in one or the other.

All-girl NBLL baseball teams. Outreach to the community to encourage enough families to build girls teams.

Anonymous 2/26/2021 11:25 AM

Use of Stazio Fields: NBLL would love to utilize more time at the Stazio baseball complex, especially to add night games under the lights for our older kids. Historically, BPR will not allow us to regularly rent those fields (ie, every Saturday night during the spring season) since those fields are set aside for tournaments and adult recreation (softball, kickball, etc). Improve Tom Watson Park: BPR often encourages NBLL to rent the Tom Watson complex instead of other facilities. However, the fields there are poor quality, not well maintained and our families have in the past expressed safety concerns at the facility. Some possible improvements include adding concrete walkways, built up spectator stands, improved bathroom and concession areas, new fencing, better drainage and addition of lighting. With increase investment, Tom Watson Park could compare to BPR’s complexes like Stazio and Mapleton. Improve North Boulder Park: We love the NBP facilities, until it rains. Games and practice at NBP are always the first to be rained out and the last to dry up. We can lose significant practice and game time there with a small storm. This could be mitigated with drainage and leveling improvements, or simply better maintenance of the grass. BPR puts significant funding into maintaining their “complex” facilities (Stazio, Mapleton), but relatively little into their satellite sites (North Boulder Park, Tom Watson Park). If the status quo of very limited access to the complexes continues, NBLL would encourage BPR to improve the upkeep of the satellite fields. Long term plan for Iris Fields: This facility is owned and operated by Boulder County, not Boulder Parks and Recreation. NBLL and Bison Baseball are responsible for most of the maintenance, upkeep and scheduling at the fields (we budget about $15K a year just to replace dirt that blows away!). It seems like Boulder County is constantly re-evaluating the long term plan for that facility. Of course, NBLL would like to see it remain a baseball complex and is happy to continue with upkeep and maintenance of the baseball fields there. Future park development: BPR has access to undeveloped parcels of land that could be developed into field complexes (one near Gateway Fun Park and another south of the Valmont Bike Park). While we aren’t aware of any plans to develop that land, NBLL would advocate for multi-sport facilities that would serve the community at-large. For example, while Pleasant View park is a beautiful complex it is often unused and is only suitable for field sports (soccer, lacrosse, football). We believe that Boulder tax payers would be better served by a multi-use facility that could be reconfigured to support a broad youth sports experience.

Pie in the sky idea: Get CU to give up some/all of CU South land to the city and build a new sports facility for baseball/soccer/football/biking. This could become something like Sandstone Ranch in Longmont. Another more do-able idea: Develop a program where user groups can provide maintenance or help fund improvement projects on facilities they use. This could move some of the burden from the city to the specific user groups.

Q27 | Is there anything else you would like to tell us about?

Thanks for everything you do for our community!

Last spring I walked to the main library branch and there were leaves and trash piled up around the north entrance that hadn’t been cleaned up since the previous fall. Not sure if this is a Parks function but it was surprising to me that one of our major destinations for the community was so unwelcoming and poorly maintained.

I appreciate the dedication of P&R staff, especially in tough times like the past year.

No

Love the Parks - keep up the good work!

The homeless camps are scary, dirty, and have made us avoid Boulder creek path! We can’t let kids or dogs wade because of needles and feces? Put up porta potties and showers! Pay them to dispose of needles safely...whatever it takes please save our town! I have to remove dog poop from parks so why is it ok to leave human waste and garbage! We pay a lot of property tax to live here and have clean safe parks!

Please clean up the downtown creek path area and keep it clean.

I appreciate the difficult and thankless work of the Parks staff in working to remove the camps of homeless persons. The city has done such a great job of providing housing options for people who want to be housed. I thank the city team for their ongoing efforts to help people and to keep our parks safe. You are doing a great job!

Please help BVSD take care of the outdoor courts especially at Centennial middle school that have several cracks at the NBRC put heating under the platform tennis playing surface so that snow will melt. Apparently this is done in other facilities where snow is an issue. This would allow the courts to be used even when snowing or very cold. Of course you should also find a carbon offset!

thank you

It has become dangerous and unpleasant to hike in our Parks. Walkways have been overrun by mountain bikes/electric bikes which destroy old and proven hiking trails. Often pedestrians hike in fear, and can no longer use those walkways due to reckless and out of control or just fast bikers!

We need safe roller skating facilities

No

In the long term we need another “chataqua” perhaps using the open space north of Boulder to create more trails

Absolutely sick of how certain locals consider places like Wonderland Lake a PRIVATE neighborhood property and do anything possible to prevent use by those who can’t afford to live there. Absolutely disgusted by those who place prairie dogs above people. And please - MORE DOG FREE TRAILS. I have had too many bad interactions where dogs aggressively came up to myself and family.

I do wish the trash can was put back in at Bear Creek Park!

<td>Charge more for parking at trailheads for out of county residents. Basically, end the $25 annual pass, charge $5/vehicle for out of county each time. You could let low income people apply for free passes. I go to trailheads and can't park because they are full. This might provide an incentive to carpool. Do it. Stop talking and make some hard be effective changes. All of us have a choice, every day of our lives, to act with compassion and open minds, or to take paths of selfishness, and fear. I don't know how many people will read this submission. But I hope that whoever does will take some of my words to heart and use the institutional power you possess to stand against injustice.

Thank you for your work and dedication!

I've belonged to the Rec center in the past. It makes more sense to go with 24 hour fitness, a place like Chuze Fitness, etc. You can work out any time for $20-$25/ month. It would keep the money in our community instead of chains. It would allow students and people who weren't wealthy to use the facilities as well.

We need more parks on the outskirts of town. Most are in the populated areas. Out East we don't have much of anything. We have an overcrowded bike park that overflows daily. Not enough parking at the Valmont bike park. The trails need work as well. Thanks

Roller skating is the fastest growing sport, with roller derby, jam skating, skate fitness, and park skating as well as rink skating being universally and diversely popular

I do wish Boulder Masters had a dedicated facility rather than the rec center pools. I recognize the difficulties associated with that, but between them and high-school teams, and sometimes other organized groups, it can be hard to fit in a swim without feeling like you're crawling over peoples' backs in the lane.

My area of town (south boulder west of Broadway) feels safe so far but it is mind boggling the amount of stolen cars, vehicles, sheds broken into, etc that I see on Nextdoor. This should not be a town where people avoid bc of crime,

I want to re-emphasize the political and ideological bias you're showing in your so-called priorities we get to pick from. Do I want to support youth activities? Yes, but to "close the educational achievement gap," No! You shouldn't be forcing me to agree with your point of view that there even is a gap, or that the community master plan can address said gap, or that we could ever agree on how to define or describe the gap. In another, I have to acknowledge that there are "systemic and historic iniquities" in order to be in favor of safe, inclusive, and welcoming parks. Why are you phrasing it that way? Why can't we just be in favor of safe, inclusive, and welcoming parks without you forcing me to agree with that other crap? Again in another, you say there are "social and cultural iniquities," without defining such iniquities. This is a terrible way to operate. It's psychological manipulation, and it's sick.

Please do not buy any more properties without maintaining and adding public health features to the ones you already have. Budget for trash collection. Work with CDOT and the county to prevent people from parking along 119 in the summer time near Canon Park Rd. Some will be killed there.

Overall, Parks and Rec does a fabulous job, and I am grateful for everything you do!

Again, the problem with Thunderbird Lake, noted above the City golf course (Flatirons GC) is terrific and I support the increased green fees and annual pass costs. Nice people running the place, too the maintenance staff at EBRC is terrific, although the pandemic has curtailed their efforts the past year. I know this is repetitive, but the City should really design ways to prioritize City residents reservation and use of the facilities and amenities. It is a shame that someone from Westminster or Longmont can use silver sneakers status to reserve an EBRC tennis court or swim lane on same footing as a Boulder City resident many thanks!

Not a fan of the evening expansion hours and alcohol licensing at the Res. Gonna come back and bite ya.

In terms of prioritizing existing facilities, it would be extremely useful to add heaters to the two platform tennis courts at NBRC as they are meant to work with heaters. Otherwise, there is no point of building them with a metal structure. As is, the courts are useless half of the time in winter (platform tennis is specifically a winter sport) because of ice and/or snow. We manually try to clean for hours but they are still not playable most of the time or a safety hazard.

A supervised 3 day per week walking program for seniors and disabled people would be so beneficial and easy to initiate at all three of the rec. centers. Would be best to separate groups by walking speeds and distance and provide for indoor walking in the gym if conditions are slick, windy, too hot or too smoky. Followed by a gentle group stretching program and an opportunity for a coffee chat. This would build fitness, community and allow access for everyone. What a concept -- and cheap too. I've mentioned this numerous times to recreation staff. No takers.

Due to a very low budget - currently not staffed to take care of what we have - really need to review the budget on keeping staff from burn-out.

You're doing a great job with the classes that you offer. I've taken many of them over the years from yoga to pottery to cooking and of course exercise. I've really benefited from all of them. Keep up the good work!!

Pickleball is the fastest growing sport in the U.S. and one that maintains health and builds tremendous community among players. This ties directly into the city’s goals of Building Community Relationships and Community Health and Wellness. Pickleball serves all age groups but is especially popular among older adults, another important target group for the city.

I feel it is inappropriate for us citizens to be commenting on whether you should prioritize financial stability, organizational efficiency, etc., we know and love our parks but it is not our jobs to balance your budget or make broad strategic decisions for you. Asking those types of questions is condescending to the staff who ARE experts in the field, and condescending to residents who obviously are not going to move the needle but taking their time out nonetheless. Ask us questions in which we can genuinely be helpful.

Take a HARD look at contracting and procurement practices. If taxpayer dollars are going to for-profit entities that are owned by privileged (white, heterosexual, etc.) people, those funds are simply upholding white supremacy and inequity. Instead, fund nonprofits, who exist to serve the public, and minority-owned for-profit businesses that build equity in marginalized communities.

The fitness classes offered at the 3 recreation centers has not been re-created since the pandemic. Kate Houlick needs to get on this because they are canceling classes. Virtual is not what people need or want. The rebranding of the Age-Well Center was a terrible idea. It is a senior center (although I know this is part of Human Services) and it needs to re-open at the East Rec Center. Why did they sign a 2 year contract with a private child care provider?

The Expand program is one of a kind in the general area. Louisville, Longmont, Lafayette and Westminster do not offer programs like this for the disabled. Since the percentage of disabled are growing, there are more people enrolling in these valuable services. This is a program I would greatly like to see well staffed and able to offer this community stimulating options, like swim classes and basketball programs. I'd love to see it grow as this group ages to offer social programs like "Walk and Coffee groups" and "Friday Nights Out."

Regarding the pocket park on the north side of The Dairy Center where there was a murder in 2020. I think it would be a good idea if the city would make that very clearly a park with a sign, enforced hours, night lighting and trash/recycling/compost receptacles OR if the Parks and Rec board does not have the bandwidth to deal with it, then instead deed that land to The Dairy Center for their oversight with outdoor programming/theater making it private property and inaccessible to the homeless population that sleeps, screams, shoots up, shits and pisses there. If what went on there happened in North

I received an email from the Boulder Pottery Lab asking me to comment on this survey. Several years ago I attempted to enroll in a pottery lab class but was shut out due to demand. I tried again multiple times without success. As far as I can tell, the pottery lab operates at considerable public expense for the benefit of a small number of “insiders.” I have no idea why this program should continue to receive public subsidy.

The small community tennis courts - Martin Park and Knollwood in particular - are wonderful. I use them often. Keep them maintained and do more of them.
We need to find AI ways to let us experience what we love about Colorado, while protecting it from being razed by too many people using it.

I Appreciate the Everybody In / Everybody Welcome attitude of the staff and users.

The pickle ball courts that were placed on court 5 at east Boulder Community Center did not engage the user group of tennis players that use these courts throughout the year. This was a poor example of collaborative decision making.

The Rec Centers and Pools (particularly in winter) should offer more after school kid time [Open Gym, swim, etc]. Very little is offered at SBRC and there are tons of 'adult programs'/scheduled blocks that prevent kids from going and doing something after school. Fairview Swim is always after school which is nice, but what about other kids who aren't on swim team; when and where do they get to swim? There are 3 Elementary schools, 2 middle schools and a high school pretty close to SBRC -- yet there are very few services. Kids just end up walking around the neighborhood and hanging out at King Soopers getting yelled at for biking or skate boarding. More services need to be added in South Boulder that are accessible by bike or walking.

we wish there were better youth programs for baseball, basketball, soccer through the city.

no

It's been tricky to find out about upcoming programs and events. Sometimes some classes have begun, or emails come too close to the start date so that I cannot make changes to my schedule to accommodate the activity.

I have had my annual pass for many years (thanks for the teacher discount!) and we refill punch passes for my wife and kids all the time. The rec center is a great resource.

Did I mention Valmont Park? Let's make it happen!

That's it...would love to see some "love" given to all of us tennis players in Boulder. It's a sport that the young and even the very old (I've played with players in their 80s!) can enjoy. Boulder isn't just a rock climbing, cycling, tri-athlete kind of town. We have many tennis players too and we don't want to be overlooked! :-) Thank you!!

Anonymous 2/20/2021 02:56 PM

I "adopted" one area (trail) that has relatively little traffic compared to the more popular trails in field guides and brochures. I'm sure others have done the same and I would like to see documentation of the wealth of natural resources (species, geology, soils) that others have compiled through the years without specifying particular areas. As a retired ecologist, I also look for ways that lithology has affected the vegetation, but find little in the literature that helps me determine this aspect of ecosystem functioning.

Anonymous 2/20/2021 03:29 PM

I'd like to see the Parks and Rec Dept. budget increased substantially. That there's two or three staffed horticulturalists in a city this big, and that almost all their help is seasonal, indicates a profound lack of understanding as to what makes Boulder unique.

Anonymous 2/20/2021 03:55 PM

Boulder is awesome for its amazing bike paths, accessible hiking trails of all levels, dog parks, human parks, public courts and sports fields, and mostly pretty clean and safe atmosphere (except as already mentioned where the scary homeless people don't care). Thanks for everything you do!! I love living in Boulder!!

Anonymous 2/20/2021 08:48 PM

I love our playgrounds and want them to be safe, but I miss play equipment for older kids - it seems that all the "improvements" over the past several years have been so safety oriented as to make them uninteresting for older kids.

Anonymous 2/20/2021 10:21 PM

Keep p the work of maintaining the tennis courts we do have and revitalize any that are in disrepair.

Anonymous 2/20/2021 10:44 PM

There are 3 elementary schools, 2 middle schools and a high school pretty close to South Boulder rec center and yet there aren't great programs at SBRC for kids, especially when it comes to the pool access or other water activities. The lake could be cleaned up so there is water access, like paddle boarding or an outdoor splash pad to use in the hot summer months. There could be more after school type activities/open swim time for kids at SBRC.
This area is crawling with kids yet it has the least kid friendly center. Half of the outdoor park space is also taken up by a frisbee golf course which is pretty annoying. You can’t use that area for anything else since you might get nailed with a frisbee. Why are we irrigating and maintaining a perfectly good park for just frisbee golf? Seems like there could be more suitable areas/landscapes in Boulder for this activity since frisbee golf doesn’t require a perfectly good field of grass. That whole park/lawn area seems like such a missed opportunity to be reprogrammed to serve more multifunctional uses. I’m not hating on frisbee golf - just thinking that it could be more successful for everyone if it was moved to a place where the golfers aren’t mad that people are walking through their course, and people that are just trying to sled down the hill or go have a picnic under a tree aren’t going to get nailed by a frisbee.

Keep an outdoor pool open in winter to allow people to swim. Cover the pool and find creative ways to keep energy use down. This would allow the city facilities to be comparable to private gyms and could increase membership for BAM and increase use of rec centers.

Tennis speaks to 2 of the values of our community: equity and youth engagement. It spans all ages: kiddos learning at a young age and playing with their friends, competitive teens and adults and as players age, they can still find joy in a tennis match with friends, time outside, exercising. Public courts don’t discriminate by age, gender, ethnicity or financial status. With public courts, folks without the financial wherewithal to afford a club membership can meet and play. More courts mean more tennis opportunities.

There has not been a new public tennis court built in over 20 years in Boulder. The city and players have increased exponentially in that time.
Some how tennis got lumped as a stagnate and therefore under funded sport since then. The current courts are in horrendous and a dangerous state and the laughing stock of the state from poorer and less affluent areas like Longmont, Arvada, etc. The time is now to change this situation and make Boulder the best tennis city in Colorado!

Outdoor activities are key in Boulder. Sports that all ages can play like Platform Tennis are important to support. Hoping more Platform Tennis Courts are built to accommodate this growing sport. Exercise and community are key to a healthy and happy town. Growing sports, like Platform Tennis, help promote community and are a great win-win solution! Speaking from our direct experience, where we worked with the Parks and Rec dept and the staff at the North Boulder Rec Center to upgrade the lights on the Platform tennis courts, we have noticed that the sport is flourishing since then. People want quality facilities that are consistently maintained. We just hope that there is budgeting being committed for upcoming maintenance that the courts will need (ie. new screens in the next few years). A friend of mine, Brock Borman, has donated a tremendous amount of time to help keep the courts maintained as he has experience installing and maintaining platform courts. There are also a few others including myself who have donated many hours to those courts. However, we should not rely on the individual goodwill of our citizens to keep our public facilities maintained. Build two more Platform Tennis Courts at another location in Boulder. There are more and more players every month that want to play this great sport but we need more facilities. “Build it and they will come”

The North Shore property and areas around Boulder Reservoir are seeing the highest numbers of visitation that it has ever seen and the trails in that area are really beginning to suffer. As people attempt to create space from passersby trails are widening and vegetation is disappearing. I would suggest taking a look at what can be done to widen existing trails and eliminate trails that have not been designated as official trails to help provide a more intact buffer to the reservoir. This area sees a lot of use and as such should have a designated person/ranger to ensure that this area is not "loved to death."

Yes, the maintenance of Boulder tennis courts are very poor. The courts have large cracks, broken netposts and nets, the courts are full of rocks and debris. Rollerbladers and skateboarders damage the tennis courts.

Future park development: BPR has access to undeveloped parcels of land that could be developed into field complexes (ie one near Gateway Fun Park and another south of the Valmont Bike Park). I would advocate for multi-sport facilities that would serve the community at-large. For example, while Pleasant View park is a beautiful complex it is often unused and is only suitable for field sports (soccer, lacrosse, football). We believe that Boulder tax payers would be better served by a multi-use facility that could be reconfigured to support a broad youth sports experience.

There seems to be strong resistance to changing much to accomodate pickleball players. We are asking very little - restripe some tennis courts, add nets (both inexpensive measures). The Rec Center directors keep saying there isn't data to back these requests. All WINTER long there have been many drop in players at SBRC, and our group (8 players) at NBRC has played consistently for 1.5 hours, 4 times/week. Rarely have there been any tennis players playing. Often times the paddleball courts are filled with overflow pickleball players, while the tennis courts are empty. So, where is the resistance coming from? Also, we know pickleball is increasing in popularity, Baby Boomers are a huge demographic, and with the coming spring/summer/fall weather, the present courts will be filled to capacity. WE NEED MORE COURTS! Thank you.

Maintaining the current facilities should be a key focus. Residents have turned Aurora 7 into a dog park which has made it difficult to maintain for other uses, such as youth baseball. Especially with the pandemic, focusing on access to outdoor activities should become part of the regular schedule in the fall and winter and spring. For example, a plan to snowblow/shovel courts can keep a large number of

As baby boomers age, access to activities is so important. Pickleball is the fastest growing sport in the country and appeals to all age groups but is especially popular with seniors. Boulder is behind in meeting the needs of the PB community. Take a look at Arvada's 24 dedicated PB court facility with skills and drills and tournaments to engage the community. Superior just built 6 dedicated courts.

Tennis & pickleball provide recreation, health, social interaction and fun for children & adults. We need to give them the facilities they need to participate in these activities. Separate courts for pickleball players would be ideal.

Anonymous  2/27/2021 07:20 AM

Anonymous  2/27/2021 10:01 AM

My personal priority is that we have enough fields for youth baseball. Boulder has very competitive teams and improving our fields will help grow this further. Personal pet peeve (no pun intended) is the dog owners who violate city code by letting their dogs run on the baseball fields.

Tennis facilities upgrade needed! - "Dedicated" public pickleball courts need to be constructed. Pickleball is a recent sport phenomenon, which has tried to be "adapted" to tennis courts. However the demand for tennis courts for "tennis" is already stretched, causing conflicts between the pickle ball usage and tennis usage. - Remodel / upgrade the Centennial Middle school tennis courts using similar level of robust construction conducted on the Knollwood and Martin Park tennis courts. Besides the East Boulder Rec tennis courts, this is facility has the highest (and growing) usage, coming from high school practices and matched, league play, Boulder Tennis Association events, Rec. Dept. Lessons, etc. Manhattan School courts are also in need of upgrade. - Build "new" tennis courts. Over the past few years, the usage of the tennis facilities at the Rec Centers are nearing "capacity" with conflicts arising between the Rec Department tennis programs, "shared" pickleball, and the growing popularity of tennis participants needing court usage. At the East
Rec Center, courts could possible be constructed where the existing volleyball courts reside, thereby having a continuity of courts in proximity to each other, some being used for instruction exclusively. - Build a new tennis / pickleball facility in a different part of town. This idea was considered during the Valmont Park planning process a decade ago yet wasn't embraced. Now, a decade later, the popularity of tennis has grown.

More shade around baseball fields and storm protection for all the dugouts.

Anonymous 2/28/2021 11:10 AM

Please remember our counties plan for keeping the sky dark. Even downlighting creates an incredible amount of excess light.

Anonymous 2/28/2021 02:10 PM

Expand outside recreation like courts

Anonymous 2/28/2021 02:47 PM

Feel fortunate to have our wonderful Rec centers in Boulder.

Anonymous 2/28/2021 03:11 PM

even in the winter we do not have enough courts. All tennis courts should have the lines for Pickleball and a longer term plan to build more courts should be established

Anonymous 2/28/2021 03:32 PM

Pickleball is a fast growing sport that can be played by people of all ages, indoor and out, and throughout the year. It is less physically demanding and less resource demanding than tennis and deserves support at a level at least equal that of tennis.

Anonymous 2/28/2021 05:41 PM

Tennis courts are empty when we play pickleball. People are always waiting for the pickleball courts. North boulder ref needs these!!!

Dear Ms. Elsner,

I am emailing to put a plug in for roller derby to be included in such plans.

May of us are professionals who enjoy this very pro female, pro glbtq sport. We desperately need a place to practice and have bouts. Roller derby does a lot for the community such as fund raising, work with the veterans and the foreign legion, awareness of and promotion of healthy inclusion of female oriented sports. We plan on further outreach this year to include education to the public of the WWII female and poc bomb groups that contributed positively to this country.

We would very much like to be of service to our wider community and have a place to practice. We respect diversity and the spaces we use. Please consider building in a space that would only help to bring prestige to your facility. Thanks so much for your kind consideration,

Thank you.

Ultimately, the only power to which man should aspire is that which he exercises over himself. -Elie Weisel

Hi Mark,

Thank you for your note and suggestion. All nine members of City Council have received your note; I’m the Director of Parks and Recreation and sharing this response on behalf of our team.

Providing the right amount of amenities and in the right locations to support our community’s health and well-being is part of our role. We last conducted a thorough evaluation of our levels of service as it relates to ballfields and dog parks as part of our 2014 master plan (city-speak for a 5-7 year strategic plan). At that time, our evaluations indicated that while we had higher than average quantities of dog parks for a community our size, we were barely meeting community demand when it comes to how many ballfields we have in our city.

We have just launched a process to update the Parks and Recreation master plan. We’ll be asking the community for input throughout the update process. The project will include an updated analysis of the quantity, location, quality, and community needs/desires for various amenities-including dog parks and ballfields. You can learn about the project on this webpage, and I hope you’ll click on the “Get Involved” section. From there you can share your email address with us, and ensure you receive updates throughout the project-including notices of opportunities for the community to share input and ideas.

I will also pass along this suggestion to our master plan project team so that it can be considered with other feedback that we receive. If you have any questions or would like to discuss further, please reach out.

Sincerely,
From: Mark Locy <mllocy@gmail.com>

Subject: Aurora 7 Baseball Fields

Hi! My name is Mark Locy, I live on 775 35th Street, very close to Aurora 7 park. There are 3 ball fields in that park. I am wondering how to go about changing one of those ball fields into a dog park. I know that there are a lot of people in my neighborhood with dogs that would make great use of that space. Is there a way to get one of those fields turned into a dog park?

Subject: Re: Boulder Tennis Association questions regarding new tennis construction and ongoing court maintenance Thanks Morgan. Good to hear BTA will be involved in the stakeholder meeting!

But while it’s good to have a voice in mid- to long-term tennis planning, BTA also has to be concerned with short-term issues. Tennis league play starts at the end of April, which brings anywhere between 20-40 of our most serious male and female players onto public courts every day. And of course these are not just the same people, BTA alone has over 200 league players on a given year. And this doesn’t include those several hundred players we host in league matches from around the Northern Metro area. Indeed, the main impression that Boulder tennis offers to tennis players from the rest of the metro area is via these league matches.

A little background... Hosting a league match, depending on the league, requires either three or five courts at the same facility at the same time (for the larger leagues, a four-court facility can work, but one match has to be sent away to another location). Obviously, there are very few Boulder facilities with four courts. And since Parks does not allow league play at EBRC and restricts play at NBRC, and since pickleball lines have been painted on two of the SBRC courts (rendering them unusable, as per Colorado Tennis Association regulations, for league play), that leaves only Centennial MS courts and Tom Watson courts as viable venues for league matches. The court surfaces at both these locations are to the point where they are no longer usable for league tennis. It’s not that we’re being fussy, it’s just that the visiting players from other teams, not only from the local private tennis clubs – which can be expected to have good facilities – but also from those other community associations that play on their public courts: the Longmont Tennis Association, the North Jeffco Tennis Association, the Centennial Valley Tennis Association, and the Thornton Tennis Association, to name a few, are all starting to find that Boulder court conditions not up to their the conditions they offer on their home courts.

For several decades, BTA has successfully been providing players who cannot afford to join a private tennis club the structure within which to participate in USTA league tennis, just as the tennis associations of the neighboring cities mentioned above are doing for their citizens. So it is with some sadness that BTA is now looking into booking public courts in other nearby cities as a temporary alternative for league play. This is not only inconvenient, in that it would mean Boulder players “home” courts would now be ten to fifteen miles away from Boulder, but it would also seem to be a black eye to the City in general if Boulder Tennis Association players, after decades of league play in the city, couldn’t find any suitable public courts to play on in Boulder proper.

So while the Boulder tennis community is definitely looking ahead to great things in the future (and we thank you for your work making it so) we also need to focus on some immediate issues. If you could point us in the right direction to carry on a discussion about court conditions for the upcoming tennis season, we would be more than grateful.

Thanks for all the work that you do!

Hi Parker,

I’m on the team that’s putting together the Master Plan update. I’ve got your information down to represent the Boulder Tennis Assn. and you can look forward to an email in the coming weeks about plans for a stakeholder meeting. Thanks so much for reaching out to us!

Hi Parker,

Thank you so much for reaching out, and for taking the time to provide an update on what BTA is thinking and planning. I’m very familiar with BTA, as I started my career with the city in our Athletics department 18 years ago. Thank you for all that you do to support recreation in our community.

Your email is pretty timely. We’re just kicking off the update to our 2014 Master Plan. Through that process, we will be conducting a thorough Needs Assessment that will include much of the work you outline below: an updated inventory and condition of our facilities synthesized with data on trends and community input on wants/needs as it relates to recreation. The final plan will inform our capital investments and operational strategies for the next 5-7 years, so community input is critical to ensure that we’re providing the amenities and services the community desires most highly.
I’ve copied our Project Manager, Regina Elsner, on this email as she will connect you to the process and how to engage. We’re actually organizing our list of stakeholders for targeted outreach in this first quarter, and BTA is on the list so we hope you’ll be able to partner with us on this effort.

Regina and/or others on our team will help with your requests for information from here, but I did want to respond and thank you for reaching out.

Sincerely,

Ali Rhodes

Subject: Boulder Tennis Association questions regarding new tennis construction and ongoing court maintenance

External Sender
Alison and Bryan...

First, thanks in advance for your time. This is Parker Dodd, President of the Board of Directors for the Boulder Tennis Association (BTA). The BTA is one of over 1,000 USTA-sanctioned Community Tennis Associations in the country, and we’ve been a fixture in the Boulder area for over two decades. Until recently, the association was primarily concerned with providing services for our members: 1) administering and overseeing USTA league play for the Boulder area, 2) running the annual Austin Scott tournament, 3) holding “Saturday morning drop-in tennis” throughout the summer at the Centennial Middle School courts, and 4) organizing indoor tennis winter socials throughout the winter months.

But as the sole representative for public court players in the Boulder area, our overriding concern has always been advocating for quality public tennis – especially for those of us who for one reason or another are not members of a private club. Over the last year, with the encouragement of our members, the board has been stepping up its commitment to address ongoing issues for the tennis community, especially for the less affluent among us.

So, in the spirit of delving into some of these issues together and seeing what we can do to address them, I’ve been asked to present a summary of public tennis court conditions at the present. So, some facts...

1. There has been an huge increase in tennis participation over the last year. The Physical Activity Council recently reported that between the third quarter of 2019 and the third quarter of 2020, national participation in tennis increased 49%. In other words, half again as many people were on the courts this year as were playing last year. For comparison’s sake, this one year increase in tennis playing matches the increase for the entire decade of 2000 – 2009. Another example: racquet sales for first time players in 2020 jumped 38 percent over 2019 sales.

2. More importantly, long before this recent tennis boom, Boulder area public courts were already bursting at the seams. The population on the Front Range in general and Boulder in particular has been burgeoning for decades, and of course the number of tennis players has increased in proportion. Regular public court players have witnessed increasingly stiff competition for courts long before this latest tennis boom hit. But while our Boulder players have watched the creation of large, new tennis facilities in Longmont, Thornton, and Arvada, I’m not entirely sure the City of Boulder has opened even a single new tennis location in the last decade, perhaps longer. (This is based on my personal knowledge and I’m willing to be corrected – that’s what we hope to clarify with the survey mentioned below.)

3. Apart from the question of overcrowding on existing courts, there is an informed consensus among our BTA members (and our approx.. 1,000 members are the serious tennis players that are out on the courts the most) that maintenance of existing courts is not keeping pace with natural deterioration. In other words, the maintenance cycle for existing courts is not rapid enough, and courts are falling into serious disrepair before they get attended to. This has been especially notable over the last five years. For example, the court surfaces at two of the largest public facilities overseen by City Parks, the Centennial MS courts and the Tom Watson Park courts, have such large cracks as to be almost unplayable.

As a first step to address this, the BTA Board is undertaking a survey of all details of Boulder-area public tennis courts. We’ll be looking into a number of things...

1. How many Parks-maintained courts there are
2. When each came into existence
3. How long it has been since any new courts have been created
4. The shape each of the courts is currently in, in terms of court surfaces, nets, lights, etc.
5. The calendar of court maintenance for the next several years going forward: which courts are scheduled for patching, which for resurfacing, etc.
6. In terms of decisions made on court maintenance, court lighting, court restroom facilities, etc., what is the process of Parks and Rec to get regular annual input from the local community of tennis players, those most affected by these decisions and most knowledgeable of court conditions?
Obviously, we don’t expect you to have the answers to all of these questions at your fingertips, and we (BTA) are prepared to do the research to come up with some of the answers, especially for the historical questions – but we figured the Parks and Recreation would be a good place to start. If you could point us in the right direction to access such records, that would be much appreciated.

Finally, personally speaking, I worked in public agencies for several years (Boulder Valley School District for 7 years and City of Thornton for 7 years) and I have nothing but respect for anyone who can face the challenges of public administration. Especially in these challenging times. But I would hasten to point out that everything is a matter of priorities. Considering that in one of your own surveys, the South Valmont City Park Survey (April, 2014), tennis courts were reported to be the second most commonly used type of field or facility, ahead of basketball courts, soccer fields, baseball and softball fields, etc. – it would seem like tennis is far lower on the list of priorities than its public participation would merit.

And we are not implying that this is a one-way street. BTA is willing to apply its resources, financial and/or volunteer, to help wherever we can. We just need to establish how we can fit into the mix. We have had ongoing and friendly interactions with Maddy (and Matt before her) on various smaller issues of court usage, etc. But with these bigger picture goals in play, we thought we should broaden the scope of this dialog.

If you could have someone get back in touch with us pointing us in the right direction, again, that would be great. Or if you wanted to schedule a virtual meeting to further discuss these issues with the Board, we’d be glad to start a dialog. Thanks!

And here’s hoping for a much better 2021 for one and all!

Hi Chelsea,

I will pass this along to the team. Since you’ve signed up for our Master Plan mailers, you will be notified of the opportunities to share your input directly. While we won’t discuss strategies until this fall, they will be based on what we uncover through these first phases so influencing is beginning now.

One thing you might do in the meantime is review our Service Delivery methodology. It is outlined in this January 2018 Parks and Recreation Advisory Board (PRAB) agenda item, starting on page 15. I am working on ensuring our memos are more plainspeak these days, and so if you get lose in the bureaucratic language-just reach out.

In particular, I’d suggest you check out the info on how we determine where to invest limited tax subsidies based upon community benefit (p. 17). You can see that we’ve developed a tool, The Recreation Priority Index (RPI), to more objectively determine if programs are providing community benefit or perhaps more individual benefit. This is helpful, because so many folks are passionate about how they recreation-whether it be yoga, swimming or roller derby – that we can use these criteria to help determine where our support is most helpful. That process is laid out in pages 24-32 (not that much reading as it is the RPI itself) and you can see the criteria we use to determine a program’s community benefit.

Check it out and LMK if you have any questions-

Ali
Hi Ali “more Knope than Swanson”!!!
LOL, that’s amazing.

I am so excited that your daughter is into roller skating now! Roller Girl is a really good book. I read it in one sitting (I hardly read), and my girls love it too. And she got you rolling too! That’s soo cool.

I’ve attached the document, but please let me know if there is anything else I can/should do.
And, if there are relevant city council meetings that you think we should attend please let me know. I imagine it will be a while before the plan becomes a draft, but I would love to influence what I can.

This document was written in 2019 and as you can imagine there have been more direct impacts to roller derby because of Covid. BCB has moved out of their practice space and everything we own is in storage. Essentially everything is on hold at the moment because we are unable to practice/play, and the same goes for all leagues that we know of. Membership has obviously declined because no one wants to pay dues to an organization that isn’t in service to them. So on top of the “regular” struggles that roller derby (and BCB) had, we now have that many more to come back from after this pandemic is over. It will require a momentous effort to rebuild - once again, but I can’t think of a more important time for roller derby/skating/community to exist than after this incredible time of isolation.

Thank you!

Hi Chelsea,

So nice seeing your name in my inbox, I hope you’re doing well. You’ll be pleased to know my 9yo got skates for her bday in Sept. and is obsessed. She got Roller Girl for Xmas and wants to know when she can start derby. She had me regularly out in my 20yo blades, and so replacements were on my Santa list.

If you want to just email me the document, I will get it to our Project Manager and put your name down. I’m so glad you got the information and are connecting to the process.

Hi Alison and Pam!

I hope everyone is doing well considering. I received the link to submit thoughts to the P&R Master Plan and I filled it out and am encouraging my skater community to as well. There wasn’t a way to upload the Benefits of Roller Derby document that we worked really hard on and I’m wondering if there is a way to submit that as well?

Thanks so much,

Hi Chelsea,

We look forward to roller derby engaging in the community input phases of the master plan! The RFP is still slated for issue in January, however, the initial engagement will likely not kick off until March or April.

Let me know January dates for trivia; would love to make it work!

That would be so much fun!

Can we pick a night in January? This will be my view Dec 15-23:

I just love your passion and commitment to following up and sharing this with us. Thank you!

Ali and Chelsea,

I’d love for us to try to rekindle the idea of getting the band together for a trivia night or something similar, with spouses included. We’ve got open evenings Dec. 19 and 20 before the holidays, as well as pretty great January availability before baby comes if you all are interested.

Hi Chelsea,

Following the fun article shared on social media about roller derby Seattle, I had a conversation this morning with the Recreation Division Director for the City of Seattle, a colleague of mine.

He shared some information about how they’re allowing Roller Derby in some of their facilities that I wanted to pass along.

1. Most importantly, they still finish all of their wood floors with oil-based products. These products result in a much-harder finish and protective layer on the floors.
2. They are allowing practice at facilities where the gym is 65’x95’ for adequate safety zones.
3. Bouts are limited to the two facilities with bleachers.
4. As with all limited resources, they are challenged with balancing access to prime time (evenings 6-9pm.) since that is all groups’ first preference.

I wanted to share as I found the conversation helpful and thought you would appreciate the information. FYI, we have transitioned to water-based finishes in our gymnasiums based upon community feedback. Water-based finishes result in a much safer experience for all as they contain very little or no Volatile Organic Compounds (VOC’s): aka The Stinky Stuff. Our community members expressed a lot of dissatisfaction with oil-based finishes and their impact on the environment and health. Unfortunately, this does mean that our floors do not have the same hardness that allows for roller skating/derby like in Seattle.

Best of luck as you explore, and I look forward to involving roller derby in our upcoming master planning conversation!

Sincerely,

The Other Leslie-

• Saturday, July 13, 2019, 5:00 PM - 9:30 PM, Boulder County Fairgrounds; and
• Autumn, 2019, Thin Air Throw Down, Boulder County Fairgrounds.

More people are interested in joining roller derby than ever. To help recruit new members - recurring membership dues are the league’s primary source of income - and to demonstrate roller derby’s inclusion of diverse lifestyles; one dedicated skater, Hermione Danger, developed this film, titled, You Can Play.

What BCB needs most is a practice space. Finding stability in this segment of the sport has been challenging for the league (and the sport as a whole) since its inception. Since 2011, BCB has used several practices space, none of which were “permanent.” Some of the spaces BCB has occupied include:

• The Boulder YMCA;
• Multiple warehouse spaces in Longmont; and
• A pig barn, among others.

Skaters and volunteers scrub sport court as they install it in the new practice space, 2018.

Currently, the closet regulation track to which BCB has access is 45-60 minutes away from most skaters. That space features several safety hazards, including large pillars in the middle of the track, which skaters must navigate around to avoid contact with one another. The distance skaters must travel, plus the inherent safety hazards of skating in the rink dissuade skaters from participating in the league.

The space the league uses now is not viable for competitive play - it is too small for regulation-play; BCB can only use the space for practicing drills. Additionally, the space is not safe for competitive play – the walls are too close to the track; the floor is uneven (making falling more likely); and the space is prohibitive of constructive league activities, such as scrimmages, bouts, clinics, open-skate events; etc.

Nearly everybody in the league is hunting for real-estate/space-for-lease in Boulder County, but usable locations are space. Locations that are available are very expensive. Some factors that impact the availability of viable roller derby locations include:

- We need approximately 13,300 sq. ft. of space with limited or no support beams, with 75 ft. x 108 ft. dimensions available for a full track, ref lane, and spectator space/storage.
- Market competition - multi-thousand sq. ft. “warehouse” space is highly sought after in the cannabis, brewery/spirit, technology industries - those industries, all of which are booming in Colorado right now, have unquestionable advantages accessing capital, ROI, and monetary impact in the community; and
- Prohibitive costs of occupancy - rent certainly is not going down any time soon.

Financial Stability

As a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, BCB has the following financial responsibilities:

Additionally, BCB has other financial obligations:

Expenses for bouts include the following:

[INSERT BOUT BALANCE SHEET]

BCB has the following sources of revenue:

- Monthly membership dues;
- Sponsorships;
- Ticket sales for bouts;
- Merchandise;
- Food and beverage sales at bouts; and
- Donations
Boulder County Bombers in the Community

BCB is actively committed to making its host community more vibrant, welcoming, inclusive, healthy, and athletic. Not only do skaters put in dozens of hours per week practicing, skating, traveling, and maintaining their gear, they are also very active in the Boulder County community. Many BCB skaters volunteer in their free time, including in County and City-sponsored programs and at community events. Aside from that dedication, BCB, as an organization, participates in many community-strengthening activities. Some events that BCB has facilitated and/or participated in include:

- Longmont and Boulder Pride Festival;
- Local brewery events;
- Street festivals; and
- Story time at the Longmont Public Library.

To help cover the league’s cost of operation, it invites sponsors to donate goods, services, and/or money to the league in return for banner advertising, PA-announcements at bouts, and reserved space inside bout venues, among other perks. Sponsors range from roller skating equipment providers, alcoholic beverage producers, brew-pubs, massage therapists, and others.

Most roller derby bouts at the Boulder County Fairgrounds feature food and drinks from vendors. from all over town, such as food trucks, pizza places, local breweries, and distilleries. Many skaters and their families own small businesses in and around Boulder County, which provide discounted services for BCB members and volunteers, in addition to other forms of support. This local involvement is integral to BCB’s values as a community-inclusive nonprofit.

BCB’s activities also contribute to Longmont’s tourism industry. As mentioned above, BCB regularly hosts teams from out-of-town. Visiting skaters rely on Longmont (and the rest of Boulder County)’s amenities, including hotels, restaurants, The Boulder County Fairgrounds Exhibit Building is an ideal venue for these events because of, but not limited to, the following factors;

• Open space free of clutter or other hazards;
• Bleachers for spectators;
• Ample parking;
• Well-known and easy-to-find location;
• Facility infrastructure, such as chairs, tables, sinks, restrooms, and other resources.

One of the downsides of using the Fairgrounds as BCB’s exclusive home is limited availability. Roller derby is just one of hundreds of events that the Fairgrounds hosts every year. Typically, BCB reserves 5-8 days to host bouts. All other bouts are “away”, meaning BCB must arrange for other leagues to host its skaters. Another disadvantage of relying on the Fairgrounds is cost. To use the exhibit building, BCB must reserve dates one year in advance, and each event costs [INSERT NUMBER]. Though membership fees, food sales, merchandise, and other sources of revenue help offset this financial burden, it is a substantial commitment that requires dedicated forethought to properly execute.

Potential Practice Spaces

With a proper practice facility, BCB may be able to host its own events without needing to heavily compete with other events/vendors needing a space to facilitate activities. The league wants to continue to use the Fairgrounds because it has the capacity and resources to host competitive bouts.

With the advent of a regulation track, BCB could provide the additional community benefits:

• Family skate nights;
• Adult skate nights;
• Skate lessons and summer camps; and
• Family friendly events (scrimmages, recruiting events, etc.).

As this plan highlights, BCB is looking for a new practice facility that can serve the league. Some potential spaces that BCB is considering include:
• The Valmont Skate Park; and
• Former cannabis cultivation facilities occupied by the licensee, Skinny Pineapple, LLC (d.b.a. The Farm).

The unoccupied shell at the Valmont Bike Park could be a perfect skating venue.
The first option, the Valmont Skate Park, features a semi-completed structure that could house a track for BCB’s use. For more details about this space, see the following link: https://bouldercolorado.gov/parks-rec/skate-features-at-valmont

The latter, The Farm, is having challenges leasing its former cannabis cultivation space because its affiliation with growing plants. Despite the cost, these types of spaces are ideal because they are environmentally controlled and offer enough space to skate without obstructions.

BCB is welcome to co-occupying a space with other sports organizations, such as hockey, indoor soccer, skate fitness, ice skating, rollerblading, etc. By co-locating some of these activities, Boulder County could foster a year-round, mixed-use recreational facility.

One feature unique to BCB is the leagues training program. Even with zero skating experience, one can walk into a BCB practice and learn everything there is to know about roller derby. First, skaters engage in an eight (8)-week skating course (“Phase One (1)”), whereby skaters learn to roller skate forwards and backwards, turn around, stop, fall without injuring yourself, and how to maintain skate gear. After completing a brief exam after the Phase One course, skaters then engage in another 8-week roller derby course (“Phase Two (2)”), whereby skaters learn the fundamentals of the sport – hitting, game play, and strategy. Skaters pay monthly dues while attending the courses, which occur two (2) nights per week. By employing these two levels of training, each skater learns safe roller-skating technique. One of the most gratifying experiences in BCB roller derby is seeing a new skater overcome their fear or anxiety of learning something new in roller skating become a thriving athlete. BCB accommodates ALL level of play, from beginners to world-ranked competitive play. In addition to roller skating, practices also involve rigorous “off-skate” fitness sessions, team bonding, classroom education, and other activities.
Having good access to a viable facility makes Phase practices and other team activities easy to schedule and execute. As a result, BCB can retain skaters and can build comradery amongst league participants.

Community Impact Plan

May, 2019
What is Roller Derby?

Roller Derby is a full-contact team sport played on roller skates. Sounds simple enough, right? Well, roller derby is a bigger deal than you might think. It is the only female-dominated (created) professional contact sport and it involves thousands of women worldwide. In fact, roller derby is the fastest growing sport in the world. [CITE]. Having sprung out of a motivation to enhance women’s visibility in professional sports, women’s flat-track roller derby really became the sport we know today in the early 2000s - Ellen Page had a blockbuster movie, Whip It, which helped bring roller derby back into the mainstream. Active even before Hollywood gave it attention, women’s roller derby is a legitimate professional sport. It involves thousands of skaters in hundreds of leagues, world-class referees, a robust rule book, elected leadership, standardized league administration, and even its own insurance. In short, roller derby a grossly undervalued community asset that deserves more investment and attention.

Roller derby bouts are family friendly and affordable entertainment. Most events welcome children free-of-charge. Not only is roller derby an entertaining, fast-paced contact sport, it is also serves an activist role in its host communities. Many people that participate in roller derby are in the LGBTQ, or “queer” community. The queer community is terribly marginalized in sports, and it deserves recognition and representation in local sports. Roller derby provides a safe outlet for individuals of ANY lifestyle and background to participate in fun, exhilarating, athletic competition.

Women’s Flat Track Derby Association

Although many roller derby associations/leagues exist around the world, the Women's Flat Track Derby Association (“WFTDA”) is by and large the most influential roller derby association in the world. It boasts over 450 member leagues on 6 continents- including over 10 in Colorado alone, and Boulder County’s very own Boulder County Bombers (“BCB”), whom we represent. WFTDA governs and promotes the sport of flat-track roller derby (a little different from the “banked” track you might be familiar with from the 70s or portrayed in the movies) in a professional and approachable way - by actively recruiting people of all ages, lifestyles, and body types and promoting values that reflect sportsmanship, community, and inclusion. The Association revolutionizes the role of women in sports through the collective voice of its member leagues around the world. There is even a worldwide “juniors” organizational body, Junior Roller Derby Association (“JRDA”), which works in relationship with WFTDA, and in which Boulder County is a member league. WFTDA-charter teams compete for mathematically calculated rankings. At the end of the competitive season (Dec 1- June 30), it seeds teams into global playoffs based on rankings. Hundreds of thousands of viewers watch the annual tournament worldwide, fans pack host stadiums, and games - or “bouts” as they are called in roller derby - are now featured on ESPN-syndicated television.

Roller derby is not just for women. Men’s roller derby is also popular in some cities. Denver has one of the highest ranked men’s teams in the world. BCB does not roster a men’s team, but the juniors league is mixed gender, and the league bylaws and handbook are inclusive of all genders. Men can skate with our home teams, but WFTDA does not sanction games involving cisgender men.

Roller Derby in Colorado

Colorado boasts one of the highest concentrations of roller derby leagues in the world. With over 10 active WFTDA leagues alone, many cities across Colorado have some sort of roller derby activity, whether it is sanctioned, recreational, or just “open-skate.” At the beginning of the 2019 season, Boulder County was ranked #66 in the world. Denver is currently #3 in the world; and Fort Collins is ranked in the top-100. Dozens of international teams visit Colorado each year to play roller derby - just last year (2018) Boulder County Bombers hosted the “Thin Air Throwdown” featuring Denver Roller Derby, Rose City Derby from Portland, and a team from Victoria, Australia. All three visiting teams are ranked among the top 10 in the world. BCB has had the privilege of playing teams from Argentina, Australia, England, and several other countries in the past, and it hopes to bring even more teams to enjoy our beautiful home and share our roller derby experience. The Thin Air Throwdown was such a success that BCB is excited to announce that it will host the tournament again in 2019. The second annual Thin Air Throwdown is scheduled for [INSERT DATE] at Boulder County Fairgrounds. We hope to host several internationally top-ranked teams, as we did last year. Participating teams are TBD.

The Boulder County Bombers

Roller derby’s impact on our local community is substantial and it can be felt in a growing proportion of our county’s residents. Boulder County Bombers have global reach, but the team’s impact is felt most here at home. Founded in 2011 as a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, the Bombers have impact hundreds of skaters, officials, coaches and fans. As of May 2019, BCB has around 150 members, including:

- 75+ adult skaters;
- 30+ junior skaters (u18 mixed-gender league);
- 25 officials;
- 6 coaches; and
- Dozens of volunteers comprised of spouses, children of skaters, friends, and relatives.

BCB wants to provide a welcoming environment for EVERY type of person. For roller derby to succeed as a sport, it needs diverse membership. Roller derby is notoriously inclusive, and the sport provides solace for individuals from many marginalized communities. In 2011, BCB had just two (2) home teams – the Daisy Nukes and the Shrap Nellies. In 2012, BCB established the All Stars travel team, which played locally with nearby leagues, like the South Side Derby Dames and the Cheyenne Capidolls. In 2013, BCB expanded again to roster a second travel team, the Bombshells. In 2014, BCB joined WFTDA as a member league. 2014 was the first year that the All Stars competed in WFTDA Division-Two (2) Playoffs. In 2015, the Bombshells participated in their first tournament. In 2016, BCB placed 5th at Playoffs, and in 2017, BCB created the addition of a third home team, the Night Witches. Now in 2019 we have 3 Home Teams and 3 Traveling Teams, The BCB All-Stars, The Bombshells and The Screaming Mimis.

Roller derby skaters are incredibly diverse, which in turn attracts a diverse audience. Roller derby is a highly entertaining, fast-paced spectator sport. Bouts last around an hour, and it is common for 2-3 bouts to occur at each event. Some tournaments can bring hundreds of spectators, while home-team bouts (these bouts just involve skaters from one league) may generate just a few dozen fans. It is incredibly important to serve skaters that engage in different levels of play, not just elite athletes. Therefore, BCB schedules bouts for all qualified skaters in three levels of play (C team, B team, and All stars). Everybody that passes WFTDA minimum-skills assessment can participate in C team (home team) play. Tryouts, facilitated by the team’s coaches, dictate who is on the B and All-star travel teams. Travel skaters receive small stipends to help assist them in traveling to sanctioned bouts and tournaments around the country. Skaters have multiple opportunities throughout the year to try out and gain a spot on the all-star roster but otherwise everybody receives ample opportunity to skate with their home team throughout the entire year (competitive season and “off-season”).

The Fire

BCB’s story is harrowing. Put bluntly, BCB needs a practice space because its last one burnt to the ground. In June 2018, an electrical fire struck the air conditioning unit inside our “practice barn” and we almost lost our league. Skaters lost hundreds of dollars of gear in the fire. The league had just purchased a new $6,370 plastic sport-court and the fire fused it to the floor board. Soot ruined expensive practice equipment and vital bout-production gear. We feared everything was lost, and we didn’t know how to move forward.
For more details about the fire that affected the barn, see the following article:

We built that practice space, literally, from the ground-up. Before our skaters and volunteers donated and installed a 8,000 sq. ft. floor-board, we skated on just a half-inch of plastic over the barn dirt. The barn burning has had a detrimental impact on the league. The barn was rustic, to say the least, but it was our home. Hundreds of volunteer hours went into making a safe, legitimate space, and it all went up in flames.

In the wake of the fire, BCB has faced dozens of resignations, leave-of-absences, and considerably less participation among current skater and officials. The league has access to a small practice space now, but it is not regulation-size. The only regulation-size track to which the league has regular access is 40 miles away in Brighton. Even so, limited time slots can force practice times past 11:00 p.m - too late for many. The familial impact the barn burning has had cannot be overstated. To start, the barn’s owner, a pig farmer and skater for the Bombers (Derby Name: Baconator (“Bacon”) was forced to sell the farm. She was integral to our league and she is sorely missed. The barn, which also sometimes doubled as a wedding venue, pig sty, and equestrian course, was a safe space for our hundreds of skaters, referees, and volunteers. Because BCB is so inclusive and welcoming of people of diverse backgrounds, its participants do not necessarily enjoy the same public privileges as the general population. Losing the barn was losing a second home for many of us.

Rebuilding the League - We Need Your Support

The fire was just last summer, but BCB has slowly been getting back on its feet! The league still has access to the Boulder County Fairgrounds’ Exhibit Building to host competitive bouts. The season is currently underway. Currently, BCB rosters three (3) travel-level teams, three (3) home teams, home-officials, and the league has a committed team of volunteers that help league operations.

BCB is rebuilding as a league. Recruitment is starting to come back up, even compared to years at peak-membership, and we look forward to a competitive season ahead. The following is the 2019 schedule for all BCB bouts:
